Louis Whips Braddock by Knockout in 8th Round

Detroit 'Brown Bomber' Youngest Champion in Ring History.

Hard Right Blasts Hopes of 51,000

By Bill McCormick
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 22.—Twenty-three-year-old Joe Louis, who has accomplished ring miracles before, became the youngest heavyweight champion in all history here tonight as he sent valiant old James J. Braddock plummeting to the canvas to lie in his own blood as he was counted out for the first time of his long career.

The knockout punch, a long, vicious right which whipped out like a striking cobra, landed flush on the champion's chin after only one minute of the eighth round. Referee Tommy Thomas finished the count in the required 10 seconds—and ring history had been made.

Braddock fell no harder than the hopes of the crowd of 51,000, with whom the courageous Irishman ruled a strong sentimental favorite. They had seen the 32-year-old king, who was soon to be crowned with a punch that uncrowned him, send the fresh, strong challenger to the floor in the first round. They had seen Braddock stand toe to toe with the Detroit "Brown Bomber," trading punch for punch and continually driving Louis before him relentlessly.

Louis Retreats.

They had seen Braddock whip venomous rights to the head which housed the fighting brain of the challenger. They had seen those rights, and hard left hooks to the body convert Louis into a retreating, fear-stricken, almost sniveling youngster. They had seen Jimmy bang the challenger's nose into a raw beet salad. They had seen the grand old man rise to such heights that it seemed only a matter of minutes until he would become the second man to batter Louis into submission.

Then they saw a right hand rip a sickening cut over Braddock's left eye. They saw another right hand dig a deep gash in the left side of Jimmy's mouth. Those who watched closely saw something else. They saw Braddock's tired old legs, whipped into as perfect condition as is possible at his age, begin to lose their spring. They saw resiliency seep from the underpinnings with each punch that landed on Braddock.

Braddock Tires Quickly.

Those weakening legs played a part as important in the dramatic climax of the fight as the actual punch which officially terminated the struggle. So tired were the legs, so heavy was the weight of years on them, that Braddock barely was able to drag himself from his corner to answer the bell which sent him out to be dropped on the canvas made bloody by his own wounds.

Credit cannot be taken from one so young who has achieved the greatest honor in the boxing game, but it must be recorded that Louis looked far from impressive in many of the 25 minutes and 10 seconds he was in the ring. He looked superb for the split second that knockout punch was traveling towards its destination, and the aplomb and nonchalance with which he gazed at Braddock while the former champion was being counted out and he himself was gaining the heavy-

5-Year Delay Shown In Tax Prosecutions

In this small building at Nassau are housed some of the many foreign corporations purportedly formed to take advantage of favorable tax laws. It is the office of Kenneth Solomon, second richest man in Nassau, whose name was brought out by a Treasury official during a recent Senate committee hearing. Each nameplate on the building represents a foreign company.

Losses in Hundreds of Thousands Established, Investigation Delayed Until February, Study Discloses.

By Sidney Olson.

Despite an established loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue to the Treasury in a five-year period through tax-avoiding schemes involving "phony" foreign insurance companies, the Bureau of Internal Revenue made no investigation whatever until last February, it was revealed last night.

It was Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, who dubbed the companies "phonies" yesterday. Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, called the cases "fakes," and Undersecretary of the Treasury Roswell Magill termed them "hollow shells."

The Internal Revenue Bureau's agents annually noted "fraud" and "tax evasion" on the returns of six New Yorkers from 1932 to 1936, it was learned, but the cases were not referred to the Justice Department nor was any ruling handed down within the Treasury.

Morrison Shafroth, chief counsel for the bureau, revealed yesterday that not until February 6 of this year, when he was visited by an unnamed tax lawyer, was any action instituted.

On that occasion, Shafroth testified before the Joint Congressional Committee on Tax Avoidance and Evasion, the lawyer told him that Charles Evans Hughes, jr., son of the Chief Justice, had threatened to

'Double Check' Nets District Big Tax Fund

$140,000 Collected With U. S. Aid, Assessor's Office Reports.

The District has traced and collected approximately $140,000 in delinquent personal property taxes since inaugurating a policy of checking Federal income tax returns for local evaders, it was unofficially reported last night.

This year, for the first time, District tax officials were permitted to scan Federal records. In many instances, it was learned, Washington residents failed to file District returns on property already declared to the Federal Government.

This "double check" system was made possible through duplicate income tax returns which every District resident was required to file with the Internal Revenue Department. These duplicate returns were handed over to local authorities.

In the office of Charles Russell, deputy District assessor, is a lengthy report on what investigators found, it was reported. Attaches of his office, however, refused yesterday to release contents of the report pending Russell's return from vacation next week, when a complete report may be made.

But, according to an unofficial spokesman at the District Building, the "double check" tax policy has brought the city "between $130,000 and $140,000 more than usual."

In one case, according to the spokesman, a resident of an exclusive hotel was forced to pay the District $10,000 in delinquent personal property taxes. This tax-

2 Battleships Will Be Built By Government

Excessive Bids Alter Plans; Both Will Carry 16-Inch Guns.

By William V. Nessly.

Both of this country's new battleships will be built in Government Navy yards and, it became clear yesterday, will be equipped with 16-inch guns.

Because of the high bids submitted last week by private yards on construction of the first ship, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison announced yesterday the ship would be built by the Government.

The law provides that one of the vessels must be so constructed, and rejection of the private bids on the first resulted in that work also being assigned to the Navy's own plants. One of the craft will be built at the New York yard, the other at Philadelphia, it was announced.

The lowest private bid submitted on the battleship was $46,212,500 on an "adjustment basis" by which the bidder would be compensated for additional costs that might be entailed in the long period of construction, 48 months. The Philadelphia Navy Yard offered to do the work for $36,560,300, and the New York yard, $37,265,843. To these figures must be added about $20,000,000 for armor and guns, supplied by the Government.

At the same time, President Roosevelt said that provisions are to be made for social security to cover navy yard workers, just as the system covers civil workers. He made this statement at his press conference when told that a portion of the

Senate Routs Foes, Passes Relief Bill

Democrats Roar Passage, Sweep Aside 2 Amendments.

Disregard Vandenberg's, Bridges' Pleas to Cut $1,500,000,000.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's $1,500,000,000 relief bill, storm center of repeated House and Senate efforts to cut, earmark and shift its costs, yesterday overrode the Senate's last unsuccessful flank attack and passed without a record vote.

Two eleventh-hour Republican attempts to slash the amount were roared down without a roll call ballot before the Senate, by voice approval, sent the measure back to the House with only modest changes.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Massachusetts Republican, sought vainly to provide $20,000,000 for an unemployment census, because "until we have the facts we can never deal with this problem" His amendment was rejected, 48 to 30.

Vandenberg, Bridges Lose.

It was Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who tried to cut the appropriation down to $1,250,000,000, to be granted to the States and administered by them. It was defeated.

Then Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, proposed $1,000,000,000 be appropriated instead of $1,500,000,000. This, too, was turned down by a voice vote.

The futile Republican drive followed the complete routing of conservative Democratic efforts to modify relief policies and shift a fixed percentage of the cost of relief to local communities.

Only one Republican amendment was successful. Sponsored by Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, it required WPA to make public names of all administrative personnel receiving payments from relief funds in excess of $1,000.

Differ on PWA.

The only major difference in the bill that passed the Senate yesterday and the measure previously approved by the House came in specific provision for WPA. As amended yesterday by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, PWA may obtain up to $340,000,000 through RFC purchase of its securities. The life of PWA was extended two years.

The House will have the choice today of accepting the Senate amendments or sending the bill to conference for adjustment of differences.

Although the bill passed by House and Senate represents a sweeping victory for President Roosevelt and WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, a general curtailment of relief rolls is in prospect. Hopkins has estimated he can provide only for between 1,600,000 and 1,700,000 relief workers with the $1,500,000,000. This will force a cut of between 500,000 and 600,000 from recent levels.

Vandenberg's Warning.

In his appeal for State administration of relief, Vandenberg warned there is "a limit beyond which the Federal credit may not be safely stretched," and declared "America is 'in the red' in more than one sinister sense."

"Is Federal credit inexhaustible?" Vandenberg asked. "It is not. And I submit that it is sheer folly to measure the potency of this Federal credit by the superficial test that our new bond issues continue to be oversubscribed in a glutted money market where private investment is dangerously discouraged and where public securities, at any price, are about the only place where these swollen inflationary investment funds may go.

"I venture the assertion that the governors of the Federal Reserve Bank will take no such easy view; on the contrary they will tell you, as Gov. Eccles did last March 15, that the time has come to quit talking about balancing the budget and actually to do something about it."

In urging the Senate to provide $20,000,000 for an unemployment census, Senator Lodge conceded "there can be no doubt that necessity demands a continuation of Federal relief."

He said facts on unemployment were urgently needed, rather than estimates, guesswork and averages struck from compilations of statistics gathered from official and unofficial sources.

"The result of this lack of knowledge is plain in every corner of the United States," Lodge said. "We

Doctors Develop Serum to Govern Sex of Children

London, June 22 (U.P.).—Development of a fermented liquid that supposedly governs the sex of babies was announced tonight by Prof. A. M. Low, outstanding research physicist, who called the discovery "a great boon to dictators."

Low, whose many inventions have won him the right to attach 48 letters to his name, said the semi-bacteriological compound was developed by two Harley street doctors whose names he was not yet at liberty to reveal.

The liquid, Low said, enables women to have either boy or girl babies, as they may choose.

The two doctors he said, already are administering it to British women for fees ranging up to $1,000.

"Dictators presumably could provide plenty of male children for future wars with this discovery," Low said.

Senate Subpenas Tom Girdler To Face C. I. O. Arms Charge; Youngstown Cheers Troops

'We've Won,' Unionists Shout as 4 Mills Stay Closed.

Militia to Enforce Picketing Order

Board Optimistic of Settlement; Lewis Flies to D. C.

By the Associated Press.

Youngstown, Ohio, June 22.—State troops stood guard in the Mahoning Valley tonight under proclamation of Gov. Martin L. Davey to see that four Youngstown struck steel plants did not reopen.

At the same time, the Governor instructed guardsmen to "carry out the terms" of a court order issued in Warren, Ohio, yesterday limiting picketing at plants of the Republic Steel Corporation in Warren and Niles.

The order was interpreted as permitting workers who have been housed in the plants since the strike was called May 26 to come and go unmolested, but that other workers could not enter.

While troops occupied the valley, under order of Gov. Davey issued last night after warnings had been made by union leaders there would be bloodshed if the plants reopened, the Federal mediation board continued its deliberations in Cleveland.

Taft Optimistic.

On questions of what the board had accomplished, Chairman Charles P. Taft said, "when we think there isn't any progress, we'll quit."

Three plants of Youngstown Sheet & Tube and one of Republic were prevented from reopening by the Governor's action. Officials of the two companies had announced that they would try to reopen today. All are strike-bound over refusal of the corporations to sign labor contracts with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, an affiliate of John L. Lewis' C. I. O.

The Governor in tonight's supplemental instructions extended the area occupied by State troops to include Stark County—the Canton-Massillon steel district, where seven Republic Steel Corporation subsidiaries are located.

One Mill Operating.

"This is due to the fact that one steel mill has continued to operate during the strike," said the Governor's statement, "and under the general orders that mill (Republic's alloy division) is entitled to continue on its present scale."

Not a wheel moved at the plants which the companies had ordered reopened today in defiance of Lewis' demand for a bargaining contract.

Troops sped to the gates at dawn to see that they did not reopen, and then stood by to avert trouble.

But the picket line outposts of Lewis' year-old campaign to unionize the steel industry were in no mood for violence. Everywhere there were cheers for th National Guardsmen who had calmed the apprehensive valley.

Unionists See Victory.

"We've won the strike," the unionists shouted at the arrival of the first contingents of 4,800 steel-helmeted Guardsmen ordered into "the Youngstown military district" by Ohio's tree-surgeon-Governor, Martin L. Davey.

The companies told a different story: Their attitude toward the union was unchanged. They insisted they would not sign a contract with an "irresponsible" party—as Republic Steel Chairman Tom Girdler had described the C. I. O.

In Cleveland, President Roosevelt's steel mediation board tonight called executives of four strike-involved steel companies to a second conference tomorrow, while observers speculated on the possibility of a White House conference if the board's efforts failed.

Chairman Charles P. Taft, 2d, and his associates left late in the day for Youngstown to confer with President Frank Purnell, of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization whose demand for a signed contract with the four companies led to the strike, flew to Washington after a second conference with the mediators today.

Chairman Taft said the board's

A Planned Economy and How It Affects a Traveler in Germany.

By Felix Morley.
No. 8 in a Series.

Copyright, 1937, The Washington Post.

Berlin, June 11.—My first introduction to the operation of a planned economy really worthy of the name was made at 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

At that soporific hour, not long after the Paris-Berlin express had crossed the German frontier, I was awakened by a determined knocking on the door of my compartment. The conductor had barely time to announce inspection by the customs officials before two of them took me in charge.

One, large and bulky, stood in the doorway to furnish the background for the little drama. The other, small and youthful, but exceedingly alert in his green, close-fitting uniform, soon made it apparent that he was the principal actor. To me, evidently, was assigned the role of suspect.

Every traveler to Germany must now fill out in advance a complete list of the money, travelers' checks or other negotiable instruments which he takes with him. This is to insure that one cannot obtain in Germany, and take out therefrom, any of the foreign currency which this country now needs so desperately to pay for its essential imports. Consequently the first demand of my inquisitor was for a display of all my few dollars and other foreign currencies as entered on my Grenzbescheinigung, or frontier certificate.

Cabinet Named By Chautemps, Aided by Blum

Socialists Rally to Back New People's Front; Bonnet Is Finance Minister.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 22.—Radical Socialist Camille Chautemps tonight formed a second People's Front government with the aid and participation of Leon Blum, his Socialist predecessor.

Chautemps announced he had assembled a cabinet shortly after the Socialist national council voted 3,972 to 1,369 to back the new government at the insistence of Blum, whose cabinet fell when a conservative Senate refused him decree powers over troubled French finances.

The Socialists announced their support was to keep unbroken the People's Front, which includes Communists, Radical Socialists, Socialists and other left parties.

Bonnet Finance Minister.

Several ministers from the Blum cabinet were held over by Chautemps, twice premier in previous cabinets and representative of one of the more conservative elements composing the People's Front.

For the key finance post, Chautemps chose Georges Bonnet, French Ambassador to the United States, a thrice holder of the position. He is considered a leading authority on France's tangled financial affairs.

To Bonnet will go the task of wrestling with the mounting deficit and monetary problems which caused the Blum government's downfall.

Washington dispatches said Bonnet, named to the American post for a six-month period, would sail Wednesday on the Queen Mary.

Socialist supporters did not give a blank check to the new government, however, but declared the Chautemps cabinet must carry out "the full People's Front program" without trying to gather parliamentary support from parties outside the Front.

They announced "the country still expects much" from the People's Front, which, under Blum, put into operation a widespread reform program including the 40-hour week, nationalization of defense industries and liberalization of control of the Bank of France.

Cabinet Listed.

The cabinet included:

Vice president of the council and minister of state—Leon Blum.

Major Powers Bolt Hands-Off Spain Parley

Europe Faces New Crisis as Reich Gets Freedom to Act Alone.

By the Associated Press.

London, June 22.—Four major powers quit the nonintervention council table today and Europe faced a serious crisis arising from the Spanish civil war.

Germany, unsuccessful in her demand for a naval demonstration against the Spanish government, was expected by authoritative sources to decide quickly upon some unilateral manifestation or action.

The four powers—Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany—were unable to agree, after three days of negotiations, on a formula to satisfy Germany over alleged Spanish attempts to torpedo the German cruiser Leipzig.

The breakup of the conference was interpreted as imperiling the structure of the nonintervention plan designed to keep the Spanish conflict from embroiling Europe.

Great Britain, backed by France, refused to accede to the demands of Germany, backed by Italy, that the four powers stage a naval demonstration off Valencia, temporary seat of the Spanish government, as a warning.

Next Move Up to Reich.

Germany charged attempts were made June 15 and 18 to torpedo the Leipzig when she was off the Algerian coast on duty for the four-power patrol around Spain.

Today's action put the next move up to Germany and authoritative sources in London expected she would decide quickly upon some action to satisfy "her honor."

All Europe waited nervously to see how drastic the expected move might be.

Some sources said they thought it might take the form of a massing of German naval might off Spanish government ports.

Germany and Italy returned to co-operation with the nonintervention committee recently on assurances that any attack against neutral ships in Spanish waters would be deemed the "common concern" of all. Both had withdrawn last month following Spanish air attack on their warships in the international patrol.

Republic Head to Testify Before Postal Group Tomorrow.

Earle Is Assailed For 'Taking Sides'

Roosevelt Backs Lewis, Holt Asserts; Farley Replies to Suit.

On the Labor Front.

The Senate Postoffice Committee subpenaed Tom Girdler, Republic Steel Corporation chairman, to testify tomorrow on alleged arming of plants and hiring of "thugs" to be used against strikers.

A group of Southern Democrats, led by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, criticized Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania for declaring martial law at Johnstown, calling out the State militia, closing the Cambria plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and "taking sides in the strike."

Youngstown, Ohio, was quiet under occupation by National Guard. At Cleveland, the Federal mediation board continued efforts to reach a settlement.

A strike vote was ordered for 300,000 members of railroad brotherhoods in an effort to force through union demands for higher pay.—Page 9.

Girdler Subpenaed.

The Senate Postoffice Committee yesterday subpenaed Tom Girdler, chairman of the board of the Republic Steel Corporation, to testify tomorrow on alleged arming of plants and hiring of "thugs" to be used against strikers.

In the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, meanwhile, Postmaster General James A. Farley, under fire for alleged failure to move mail into some strike-bound plants, filed answer to suit by the Republic Steel Corporation to compel delivery of food and clothing to plants at Niles and Warren, Ohio.

Attempt to Involve U. S. Seen.

Farley in his answer said Republic's action was an "attempt to involve the Federal Government in the strike." He said the parcels mailed by Republic were not sent in good faith, "but with the design and ultimate and real purpose of involving the postal authorities and postal employes in the controversy existing between Republic and its striking employes."

Judge James Proctor gave Republic a week to file an answer to Farley.

Announcement that Girdler will be called was made by Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, committee chairman, as the President disclosed at the White House he had made repeated personal efforts by telephone to settle the steel strike, from 10 a. m. Sunday until 12:30 a. m. Monday.

On Capitol Hill, a group of Southern Democrats, led by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, turned a critical fire of comment on Gov. Earle, of Pennsylvania, for declaring martial law at Johnstown, calling out the State militia, closing the Cambria plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and "taking sides in the strike."

Roosevelt Criticized.

Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, accused President Roosevelt and his Administration of "silent and hearty co-operation" with the C. I. O., and stepping into the strike situation to "save the face" of John L. Lewis.

In the House, Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, charged on the floor that President Roosevelt and the Governors of Ohio, Michigan and Pennsylvania are solely responsible for violence and bloodshed in the steel strike "because they failed to protect persons wishing to work."

In summoning Girdler, McKellar acted at the request of Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, sponsor of a Senate resolution to investigate alleged interference with mails in the strike area.

Postmaster General Farley also will be called late this week or early next, also at the request of Bridges. McKellar said two Chicago police captains and the Chi-

'Ye-o-w, Nobody Kin Beat Joe' -- It's U Street's Night to Howl

A typhoon of joy swept through Washington's "little Harlem" last night after Joe Louis' right fist had knocked out Jim Braddock in Chicago. Thousands skipped along U street, making phantom punches, waving bottles, touching off firecrackers and yelling over and over the triumphont cry:

"Ain't nobody can beat Joe Louis! Ain't nobody can beat Joe Louis! Y-e-o-w!"

Automobiles tore along U street, their horns going like mad and their occupants screaming their joy. One man stood on a running board waving a crutch. Others waved bottles and smashed them on the asphalt when they were empty.

Some exuberant Louis rooters turned in a false fire alarm. Fire apparatus, adding the scream of sirens to the bedlam, raced down U street at the height of the congestion. Three other false alarms were sounded in quick succession.

Hundreds of policemen and plain-clothesmen patrolled U street, but at a late hour nothing had happened beyond an explosion of happiness.

During the fight U street presented a strange spectacle. Nobody walked. Here and there, outside the billiard parlors, the hamburger joints and the liquor stores, were throngs intently listening to the broadcast from Chicago.

D. C. Cabbie Earns $625, Covers 4,000 Miles In Showing English Couple Highspots in U. S.

An Englishman with an Oxford accent walked up to a cab driver in front of the Dodge Hotel June 1 and asked: "How does one go about seeing the United States?"

Yesterday, just 21 days later, Joseph N. Carnaggio rolled into Union Cab headquarters, at 1258 Twenty-second street northwest, with $625 in his pocket and 4,000 extra miles of travel to his credit.

"I not only sold him on the idea that a taxicab is the best means of travel in America, but I sold him so well that he gave me a bottle of the perfume he manufactures only for Queen Mary."

The Englishman, whose name is Francis J. Smith and whose home is in Watford, was accompanied by his wife. Within two months from now, they assured Carnaggio, they are coming back and bring their son and daughter with them.

"I'm going to take them to Yellowstone and all out West on that trip."

This time the Smiths did not miss much of the Eastern part of the United States and Canada. Carnaggio, who declared he has been in the sightseeing business so long he did not even need a map to go by, took them to Mount Vernon, Arlington, Yorktown, Jamestown, Charlottesville, over the Skyline drive into Luray, Gettysburg, Harrisburg, Ontario, Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, Lake Placid, Albany, Saratoga Springs, Silver Lake, Mirror Lake and New York City.

"And that place in Canada where the quints live. We saw the quints. Also, we went to the White Face Mountain in the Adirondacks.

"I put Mr. and Mrs. Smith on the Berengaria at noon Saturday. They had one of the best times an Englishman ever had in America."

Carnaggio had no excuse to offer for not taking his passengers to Boston. He explained, though, that he was interested in seeing how many capitals they could visit. That was why he stopped in Harrisburg and Albany.

"They paid my hotel expenses, too; so, of course, we stayed in nice places. If I'd stayed here I'd probably have made $10. Believe me, there's nothing like travel."

5-Year Delay Shown in Tax Prosecutions

Action Against Evasions Finally Launched in February.

dissolve his law partnership unless his partner, Richard E. Dwight, "straightened things up" with the Treasury.

Dwight was the leader in organizing a foreign insurance company in the Bahamas, which he allegedly utilized to escape the payment of $230,699.37 in taxes in the past five years.

The firm of Hughes, Dwight & Schurman was dissolved on June 10.

Dwight Explains Plan.

Dwight, in New York last night, told the Associated Press:

"I have earnestly endeavored to obtain a decision by the Internal Revenue Bureau as to the deductibility of the interest, but no decision has ever been made.

"The President has been erroneously informed by the Secretary of the Treasury, doubtless unintentionally, with respect to a material fact in my case.

"I attached to my 1932 income tax return, in which I claimed the interest deduction, a disclosure of the important elements of the transaction, including the single premium paid, the dividend and policy loans and the amount of the interest deductions claimed."

No Fraud Penalty.

He also said he had given the general counsel of the Internal Revenue Bureau last Friday a complete memorandum of cited cases showing no fraund penalty has ever been imposed against a taxpayer who made a disclosure in his returns.

He also has delivered to Commissioner Guy T. Helvering of the bureau a check for the full amount of the taxes claimed plus interest at the rate of 6 per cent.

It is doubtful the check will be accepted, it appeared, as Dwight is liable, with the others, to a 50 per cent penalty fee besides the full amount due.

Disclosure of the names was made yesterday by Mason B. Leming, a Treasury attorney, a dry-spoken, precise man. Because of the slowness of procedure and the rambling discussions in which committee members, in apparent exasperation, tried repeatedly to get brief, clear statements of the facts involved, the two-hour session was almost concluded with only Dwight's name having been mentioned.

Vice Chairman Pat Harrison, head of the Senate Finance Committee, aided Leming, prompting him swiftly, and brought out the other five New Yorkers' names in the last five minutes.

These were Winfield Ayres, a doctor, 68; Henry W. Lowe, insurance broker, 58; Lawrence Marx, cotton broker, 48; Jacob W. Schwab, cotton broker, 48, and George Thoms, attorney, 58.

The Standard Life Insurance Co. was the organization set up by Walter C. Baber, British citizen, of the New York firm of Baber, Baylis & Co., insurance and tax consultants, in November, 1931. It was incorporated in Nassau, Bahama Islands.

Eight insurance policies were issued to the six New York men, totaling $15,275,000.

Deducted $578,000.

Dwight used the insurance company in order to claim tax deductions of $578,072 in five years. He reported his income as $17,518.09 for the entire period, and after paying no taxes for the first three years, paid $299.63 for 1935. His actual cash expended in arranging the setup was $37,115.49.

Leming related the method as follows:

In 1932 Dwight's income was such that a deduction of $140,000 would eliminate the need of taxes. Before the year's end he applied to the insurance company for a $4,000,000 policy, on terms wherein he paid one premium of $2,793,720. His agreement with the company was such that he was immediately loaned back $2,832,540, the loan value of the policy at the end of the first year. Interest on the loan was payable in advance.

Through the Royal Bank of Canada, Nassau branch, to whose officials the deal had been explained, Dwight made a one-day loan at a cost of $401. Dwight then paid the premium, received back the loan, paid the interest thereon and then claimed a deduction from his income tax of $141,628. Through this deal he spent $8,361 in arrangements, but had brought about a reduction of $53,448 in his income tax, bringing it down to nothing for that year.

Other Schemes Similar.

Similar arrangements obtained for all the other persons involved, with varying amounts and results, but finally resulting in the present situation, where the six wealthy New Yorkers reported their total earnings in five years as $150,000; claimed interest deduction (disallowed by the Treasury agents) of $1,482,000, and paid a total of $11,566 in taxes in that time. Their corrected tax statement should have read $561,058 for that period.

La Follette drove hard at the apparent delay in the Internal Revenue Bureau in settling the Dwight returns after Commissioner Helvering had revealed that representatives of all six taxpayers had attempted to settle in full in his office "two weeks ago," after the President's message had gone to Congress.

La Follette asked: "Do you mean to say four years have gone by before these returns were examined?"

Helvering said: "No, these matters were discovered in 1934."

"It seems to me," said La Follette, "that perhaps our major task will be to speed up procedure in the bureau. With improved procedure maybe we could get some action."

Magill interjected: "I entirely agree with you, Senator. Procedure could be much better. There may be many more such cases as these."

Helvering added: "The returns were noticed, as they say in the vernacular, to be screwy some time ago. But our rule against proceeding where there is a disclosure prevented our taking it to the Justice Department, although there have been many discussions and conferences on the question."

New Faces in Congress

Mystery Still Veils Election Of New Member of Congress

REPRESENTATIVE ARTHUR B. JENKS.

House Committee Still Must Rule on the Ballot Dispute of Byron Jenks, New Hampshire's Certified Representative.

By Liam K. Lenihan.

All the ingredients of mystery, confusion and suspense were mixed together and dished out in liberal doses of double-headaches for Arthur Byron Jenks, Republican Congressman from New Hampshire, the morning after his election last November.

Winning by 550 votes, Jenks' election was challenged by his opponent. A recount followed, resulting in a tie, and the question was referred to the Ballot Law Commission. That body decided against Jenks and ordered the Governor to issue a certificate of election.

And now for the mystery of the missing 34 ballots. Ten days after the verdict of the commission and before the Governor had acted on its recommendation, a stranger telephoned Jenks to tell him of 34 ballots that had been marked but not counted in his township.

Though expert ccunters failed to find the ballots, sworn affidavits affirmed the charge. Finally, after the matter had reached the cacophony stage, the commission handed Jenks the 34 missing ballots and the election.

But the ghost of the missing ballots still walks abroad. Jenks' opponent brought the question to the attention of the clerk of the House. The Government Printing Office has now issued a voluminous report presenting all evidence in the case. Arthur lawyers for both sides file briefs, the committee on elections will decide whether Jenks is a Congressman or not.

Biographical sketch: Jenks was born in Cape Cod, Mass.; was 30 years a shoe manufacturer; retired from business ten years ago to "catch up on golf and the Florida sunshine."

He is 70 but still looks vigorous—"I never was so fit to work in all my life"—a pungent commentary on the much-discussed thesis that mental alertness is missing at that age.

Representative Jenks looks upon the present wave of strikes as "a prairie fire that rushes onward to self-extinction." And he feels shorter hours are the only cure-all for unemployment, together with some planned exodus of the jobless to the farms.

Hobbies: Golf. He parried a question as to what his handicap is. He must be pretty good, though, for he plays in the Senior Triangle Golf tournaments between the United States, Canada and England.

2 Battleships Will Be Built By Government

Excessive Bids Alter Plans; Both Will Carry 16-Inch Guns.

difference in bids between the private builders and the navy yards was laid to social security and bonding costs, and various other risks to which the Government yards are not subject.

The President asserted, however, that these extra costs were not large enough to account for the $10,000,000 difference in bids.

He said, in response to questions that he likely will take steps to extend social security to navy yards, but was unable to say when it would be done.

No official announcement has been made on the 16-inch guns being installed in the new ships, but the President called attention to Japan's rejection of this country's proposal that the five leading naval powers agree to a limitation of 14-inch caliber on guns for capital ships. The implication was clear this this country had no choice but to install the larger weapons.

The State Department previously, in making public the fact that the United States had approached the other naval powers on gun limitation, had said none of the replies would be made public until all had been received and studied. From Japan, however, have come dispatches saying that country has rejected the suggestion.

Not a Precedent.

Assistant Secretary Edison, announcing award of the first battleships to the Navy yards, said that "in fairness to the private shipbuilders I must emphasize that they all made an honest effort to get the business."

He said he wanted to make it clear that action decided on in this case does not mean the Navy is abandoning its policy of fostering private shipbuilding.

"Nobody's going to win a war," he said, "without the interest of industry in the United States."

"Had the cost estimates been a little closer together," he continued, "the private yards still would have been in the picture so far as this business was concerned."

Construction of the ships will not be started until more detailed plans are developed, the Assistant Secretary said, though he said the work would not wiat on an official decision as to gun sizes. Much work can be done before the gun emplacements are reached.

Changes Possible.

He said the navy yards would "attempt" to utilize no longer than 48 months for the work, but made it clear that if changes in design are decided on while the ships are building the changes will be made and the tentative time limit forgotten.

At the time the bids were opened, officials said a decision on whether the work would go to private or Government yards probably would be reached early in July. Further consideration of the offers, however, led to the decision yesterday.

No announcement has been made as to the bids on two submarines, opened at the same time as the battleship proposals.

Two Men, $5,000 Seized by Police In 'Number' Raid

A batch of alleged "numbers game" slips and $5,000 in cash were seized and two men arrested by police, who raided a grocery store at 1157 Twenty-third street northwest, yesterday.

The two men were charged with conspiracy to violate the lottery law. They said they were Benjamin Kolodin, 36, 1200 block of Oates street northeast, and Barney Susser, 38, who gave the grocery store as his address.

The prisoners were booked at police headquarters and then released in $2,000 bond each for a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

payer, in his Federal income return, declared certain stocks and bonds. He failed, however, to include these items in his tax returns to the District, it was reported.

In numerous instances, it was said, local investigators were unable to collect delinquent or unpaid personal property taxes because the taxpayer had moved from the city and his or her whereabouts could not be traced.

Before all collections are completed, it was estimated, the District will receive "perhaps $1,000,000,000" in heretofore unpaid property taxes.

Failure of the District to collect thousands of dollars annually in delinquent taxes—especially levies on personal property—has for several years been cited by members of Congress in sustaining their position that the Federal payment to the District be reduced or eliminated.

Boy Beaten, $17 Taken From Gasoline Stand

A 16-year-old gasoline station attendant was beaten on the head early yesterday by colored bandits who stole $17 from the cash register of the station in the 1900 block of Benning road northeast. The youth, George Kline, 1106 K street southeast, said he was struck from behind several times with an instrument wrapped in newspaper.

Kline was found on the station floor by a passing motorist. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where it was said his skull was seriously injured.

Strikes Close 3 Newspapers At Pittsburgh

Mailing Room Workers Demand Increases in Salaries.

Pittsburgh, June 22.—A sit-down strike of approximately 150 mailing room employes forced the three Pittsburgh newspapers, the Press, the Sun-Telegraph and Post-Gazette, to suspend publication "indefinitely" today.

The Publishers Association declared the strike broke a contract which runs until January 7, 1938, and will throw more than 5,000 employes out of work.

The association said the union demanded an immediate daily pay increase of $1.20 for day work and $1.50 for night work.

Strikers barricaded themselves in the mailing rooms of the Sun-Telegraph.

The Publishers Association said that while it was willing to enter into immediate negotiations or arbitration, it regarded the strike as a test of "whether contracts in collective bargaining with international unions are valid."

The strikers left the newspaper plants early tonight, but officers of their union could not be reached for comment. The Post-Gazette, only morning paper in Pittsburgh, sent its employes home and broadcast its news by radio until midnight.

Gov. Earle in Harrisburg advised the union to call off the strike, observing its contract runs until January.

Earle recommended that Mayor C. D. Scully, of Pittsburgh, consider the strikers "trespassers" unless "they recede from their position and return to work until expiration of their contract."

Scully was not available immediately for comment.

Erring Motorist Facing 9 Charges After Dizzy Chase

Nine charges were lodged against Clarence Butcher, 30, of 3641 Patterson street northwest, last night after he led police a dizzy chase of more than 25 blocks through the streets of the Third Precinct.

Police started chasing Butcher at Eighteenth street and Connecticut avenue northwest when he fled after being observed allegedly violating a "no parking any time" sign.

Capt. Arthur Miller and Detective Roy Blick chased the fleeing machine which they finally forced into the curb at Twentieth street and Florida avenue northwest.

Butcher was taken to the Third Precinct station and charged with passing five red lights, one stop sign, speeding over 50 miles an hour, violating the parking sign and indecent exposure. He posted $800 bond for his release.

365 Students Are Graduated At Roosevelt

Maurer Presides; Davis Presents Diplomas in Stadium..

Three hundred and sixty-five Roosevelt High School seniors moved in a colorful procession into their stadium yesterday and while school and class colors picked up the afternoon breeze, received diplomas of graduation and other honors bestowed by their school.

Presiding over the ceremonies was Robert A. Maurer, vice president of the board of education, and there to present the diplomas was Allan Davis, who until retirement last December was the school's beloved principal.

The graduates marched onto the commencement grounds to the music of the school orchestra, led by Miss Emma Louise Thompson, and later in the exercises a trombone quartet gave a selection.

The Rev. Paul Schearer, of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, gave the invocation, and Miss May P. Bradshaw, principal of the school, announced the award winners.

Yvonne Curpen gave the class valedictory.

Diplomas went to:

Bill to Prevent Abattoir Held 'Communistic'

Gobel Concern Charges Legislation 'Ruthless Exercise of Power.'

Swinging all their heavy artillery into action, defenders of the proposed Gobel abattoir yesterday wound up hearings on the Norton "nuisance industry" bill with sweeping denunciation of Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes and a warning that the pending measure smacks of communism and fascism.

Marching to the witness stand with determination to salvage plans for the slaughter house which Adolf Gobel, Inc., would build in Benning road northeast, the New York firm's president and legal experts charged:

That the bill is directed solely at one company—Gobel.

That "pointing a gun at one person is being done in Russia and Germany, but the practice is unsafe and should not be done in this country."

That the packing house stands to lose its $1,400,000 investment if the legislation at issue is enacted.

That such enactment would consitute "a ruthless exercise of power."

In addition, William J. Neale, president and general counsel for the Union Stockyards Co., told the committee his business faces extinction if abattoir supporters lose their fight. He said that Secretary Ickes, who last month announced that the Langston PWA housing project on Benning road would not have been undertaken had the abattoir row been foreseen, could have been informed of this possibility by the simple expedient of a telephone call.

On similar grounds, Neale deprecated testimony on Monday of Myron Davy, general manager of National Insured Homes Corporation, that a $2,000,000 housing project in close proximity to the abattoir site would not have been started had the backers known that Gobel intended to reopen its plant.

Knew of Abattoir.

"Mr. Davy knew when he invested in the land that the stockyards were nearby and the abattoir planned to reopen," Neale charged.

He advised the committee, in weighing testimony presented earlier in the day by Frederick H. Walton, slaughterhouse construction expert of the Interior Department, to bear in mind that Walton's father formerly was a superintendent for Armour & Co., and that that plant now is expanding its services in Baltimore.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, who was presiding, told the witness that neither Armour nor any other out-of-town packer had anything to do with introduction of her bill.

Neale's implication that Walton was opposing the Gobel abattoir to protect Armour's advantages in the Washington territory was answered further later in the hearing when the Interior expert obtained special permission to return to the stand.

"My father left the Armour company in 1900," Walton said, "and never since has he been employed by any packing firm. He now is a farmer near Lynchburg. I never have received pay from any packing house."

First to take the stand when the second and last day of House hearings opened yesterday morning, Walton scouted opposition arguments that operation of the abattoir would relieve the unemployment situation here. The Gobel forces contend that the plant would furnish from 250 to 500 jobs, depending upon the season. Walton's point was that any such gains would be offset by personnel layoffs in out of town distributors facing this new competition for business.

History Traced.

The witness, who is attached to the Interior Department's Office of Indian Affairs, traced slaughterhouse operations on the Benning road site since the first Department of Agriculture permit was issued October 22, 1906. The business then was known as the Washington Slaughtering & Cold Storage Co., he said.

The Gobel company, he continued, first entered upon the scene in 1930 when a permit to operate was obtained by Gobel-Loffler, Inc. On February 28, 1933, the plant was shut down because hard times stood in the way of modernization and various other improvements ordered by the Bureau of Animal Industry. Accordingly, the B. A. I. permit was withdrawn as of March 2, 1933.

C. A. Barker, representing the Southeast Council of Citizens Association and last pro-bill witness to be heard, said the area in question is rapidly being de-industrialized and this happy tendency would be checked by a slaughterhouse.

Launching the anti-bill offensive, Joseph Gammell told the committee the Lincoln Park Citizens Association, which he represents, and the Benning and Kenilworth Citizens Associations are abattoir supporters. Personal investigation of meat packing plants in Baltimore convinced him that their odors are not serious, he said.

Project Indorsed.

William W. Keeler asserted that the Central Labor Union, which he represented, not only indorsed the Gobel project, but believed the Norton bill, and its Senate companion which is still in committee, to be a threat to District labor.

A human touch was lent the proceedings when Mrs. Edgar Duvall, 4925 Benning road, protested that her husband had a $75-a-week job with the abattoir before it shut down in 1933 and now he works longer hours in a warehouse for far less pay.

"It's a shame to deprive anyone of nice, clean, healthful, honorable work," she told the committee.

The Lincoln Park Citizens Association, of which he is president, is opposed to the District becoming a "gigolo's paradise," Alfred D. Calvert told the House committee in his argument against passage of the bill. The measure, he charged, represents the attempt of the "Rasputin of the administration to change the face of this section of the city."

According to Calvert, enactment of the bill would jeopardize livestock activities of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, the District Home for the Aged, the Soldiers' Home and other Government institutions here.

The heavy shelling did not begin, however, until Neale took the stand. Methodical in his presentation, he reviewed the development of the stockyards from its establishment in 1877 and recounted its close association with slaughterhouse operations, which were begun in 1890 on the same site now in dispute.

Will Reopen Plant.

When the abattoir suspended business in 1933, the shutdown was only temporary, Neale emphasized, and abandonment of the enterprise never was intended. Meanwhile, the stockyards continued in operation.

"And we intend to stay in business," he said, "unless we are driven out by this bill."

The stockyards president and counsel said it was no secret that the Gobel Co. eventually would reopen the plant, pointing out that four or five employes have been kept on the premises since 1933 for maintenance purposes.

Neale cited an agreement between the stockyards and Gobel by which the latter would have use of spur trackage on the former's property. The abattoir would build a concrete loading platform between the railroad tracks and stock pens to conform with Bureau of Animal Industry regulations.

Last June, the witness continued, the stockyards and the Gobel Co. entered into a 15-year lease under which Gobel was to pay $5,000 a year for the first five years for stockpen and trackage privileges. During the next 10 years the fee is to be $7,500 per annum.

Neale said his company has been operating at a loss since slaughterhouse operations ceased. Resumption of business, he declared, would relieve the Capital's unemployment situation by creating 300 to 500 new jobs for local residents.

$1,400,000 Expended.

If, on the other hand, the Government prefers "absolute confiscation of stockyards property and destruction of its business," Congress must make compensation not only for the land involved but also the business values extinguished, he said.

D. Edward Clarke, of Gobel's legal staff, sketched the history of the company's efforts since last summer to reopen its local business. He said present zoning regulations are adequate to control nuisance industries and reminded the committee that the District government had granted a building permit on payment of $628, then launched a campaign to prevent its being carried through.

Stating that the New York firm paid $1,400,000 for the business, he questioned the fairness of this investment being nullified by passage of a bill which would "disqualify" Gobel.

"I can't believe Congress will allow such an injustice even at the behest of Mr. Ickes," Clarke shouted.

Frank M. Firor, president of the company, asserted in reply to questioning by Mrs. Norton that acquisition of the property was a $1,400,000 cash transaction, that the firm has 2,300 stockholders with no one holding a controlling interest.

Youth Encased In 'Iron Lung' Safe in Chicago

Transfer to Hospital From Train Made as Tense Crowd Watches.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 22.—Frederick B. Snite, jr., prisoner in an "iron lung" respirator for 450 days, concluded one of the most dramatic adventures in medical annals today—a 12,000-mile journey by boat and train from China.

A crowd of friends and admirers cheered the 26-year-old Notre Dame graduate when he arrived encased in the huge life-preserving mechanism. Lying flat on his back, he looked at them through a mirror fixed at an angle over his face and responded with a wide grin. He spoke slowly in a low voice:

"Hello, everybody; I'm glad to be home."

The curly-haired youth was stricken with infantile paralysis March 31, 1936, in Peiping, China, while on a world tour with his banker father, his mother and sister.

The disease paralyzed him from his throat to his feet. He was placed in a respirator. The device sucked air into his lungs 15 times a minute. He could not live outside the cubicle, attendants reported, for more than three minutes.

Despite the perils of the voyage, he elected to return to Chicago in the hope scientists here eventually could restore the vigor of life to his still body. Accompanied by doctors and nurses and family, he moved by rail to Shanghai, June 3, successfully negotiated a delicate transfer to the liner President Coolidge June 6, and sailed to San Francisco. The vessel docked there Saturday. The smiling young man in the "iron lung" was moved gingerly to a special observation car and rushed across the West.

Seven Chinese nurses, two American nurses, one physician, a physiotherapist and three electricnans were in constant attendance.

The medical Marco Polo's car was backed to a loading platform in the Northwestern Railroad yards this morning. The rear gate and door were removed. Twenty-five doctors, nurses, electricians and moving men—all wearing white surgical masks and gowns—bore the respirator down a ramp, through an express warehouse and into a moving van that had been previously fumigated and lined with sterile sheets.

Spectators, behind rope lines maintained by 20 officers, watched tensely while the current cables attached to the "lung" were switched from the batteries on the train to the batteries in the big van.

Escorted by motorcycle policemen, the truck rolled to the Billings Hospital on the South Side. Another anxious moment and the power lines were changed again.

Fourteen attaches bore their 1,100-pound burden to a room on the third floor.

Thus ended a $50,000 trip from the Orient to the Midwest.

"My son has come through in fine condition," the senior Snite announced. "We believe he has even gained."

Wage-Hour Bill Contains Vices, Richberg Says

Uncontrolled Discretion, Other Dangers Seen in Measure.

The man who was known as "Assistant President" during the later hectic days of the NRA—Donald R. Richberg—told a congressional joint committee yesterday the Black-Connery wages-hours bill had "vices" of "indefinite standards, uncontrolled discretion, undesirable extent of authority and resulting difficulties of enforcement."

The lawyer hastened to add that in his view the bill's "weaknesses" could be "easily eradicated."

He acclaimed the measure's objectives as sound and "shrewdly drafted," but asked that certain provisions be revised or excluded on the grounds they were without general public support, would weaken and impair the legislation and that, "although theoretically beneficent," they might "in fact prove to be undesirable."

NRA, he said, showed graphically "the danger of overloading an administrative body with too many tasks of great complexity and vesting it with too much discretion in their performance."

He stated the "NRA was squeezed to death" between "an increasing pressure from many sides to do the impossible and an increasing resistance from many sides to regulations which lacked well-informed public approval."

The joint Congressional labor committees, nearing the end of hearings on the bill, heard Richberg's criticisms as the first direct review of the Black-Connery bill by one of the men most instrumental in the Administration's other attempt to fix wages and hours.

He struck at the granting of "too much discretionary power" to a board; stipulated a 40-cent minimum wage and a 40-hour maximum work-week, with the board authorized to vary wages not more than 10 cents an hour up or down in justifiable cases; and upheld the view of John L. Lewis and William Green, labor leaders, that collective bargaining eventually will prove the most desirable means toward the ends sought.

Navy Surgeon's Funeral.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning for Dr. Benjamin S. Thane, U. S. Navy World War surgeon, who died last Thursday at his home in Wahpeton, N. Dak. The funeral cortege will assemble at the Fort Myer gate of Arlington National Cemetery at 10 a. m. and services will be held at the grave.

Army Reservist Heads Ousted In Soviet Purge

Leaders of Civilian Group Denounced for Wrecking, Embezzling Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, June 22.—Four high officers of Osoaviakhim, Soviet civilian organization for building up an army reserve, were removed from office today in a shakeup of the organization's personnel, it was announced.

The changes followed execution of Gen. Robert P. Eideman, former head of the Osoaviakhim, June 13, with seven other army officers tried for treason.

Two vice presidents and two vice managers of aviation in the organization, which especially is concerned with civilian training in aviation and chemical defense, were shifted to other jobs. The secretary and another member of the executive council retired voluntarily.

Vice President Daniloff, formerly in charge of the organization's activities in White Russia, was removed and denounced as carrying out Eideman's instructions to wreck the Osoaviakhim.

Charges against him were that he was recommended by Eideman, that he voted for Trotsky resolutions in Leningrad a decade ago, that he joined Director Milonoff in paralyzing defense work of White Russia, and that he spent state funds for his own enjoyment. Milonoff had been removed previously.

Daniloff was accused of maintaining a costly country villa and keeping a band of musicians to entertain him.

Far Eastern Director Bazhenoff also was removed and called an "enemy of the people." He was accused in the newspaper Pacific Star of "destroying the work of the whole organization."

On another front, "enemies of the people" were accused of wrecking the cement trust. The newspaper Za Industrializatziu declared conditions in the industry were "shameful," and said only six of the trust's factories were operating normally.

Britain Opposed To Debts Parley

London, June 22 (AP).—Sir John Simon, the British chancellor of the exchequer, announced to the House of Commons today Great Britain does not intend to reopen war debt discussions with the United States in connection with pending proposals for an Anglo-American trade agreement.

The chancellor made the statement in a written answer to a question from the floor. He was asked whether it was correct to infer from a recent government statement that "arrears of principal and interest now due the United States in respect to British war debts now amount to £174,000,000 (approximately $870,000,000)."

Sir John confirmed the figure, but carried another question, asked by Laborite Member Emanuel Shinwell, about what was to be done.

U. S. To Withdraw Mrs. Plisco Action

A charge of conspiracy to violate customs laws against Mrs. Selma Plisco will be nolle prossed today by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. She is the wife of Abe Plisco, alias William Dietz.

The Post learned the charge will disposed of this morning when Mrs. Plisco appears before Turnage. "Insufficient evidence" was the reason given for dismissal.

Mrs. Plisco was seized by police March 29 in her home at 1732 Hobart street northwest. The charge alleged she had several thousand dollars worth of furs into the country.

Her husband was charged with violating the gambling laws when arrested in the raid. Alleged gambling equipment was taken from the home.

Leahy Brands Soviets Slaves Of Central Rule

Regimentation of Industry Should Permit Freedom, Admiral Says.

By the Associated Press.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, told graduates of the Army Industrial College here yesterday, Soviet Russia has regimented her people "to such an extent that they appear to be virtually slaves of the central organization."

The Navy's highest ranking officer made the statement in discussing industrial planning for military purposes in delivering a graduation day address.

Setting forth the steps taken by leading world powers to insure adequate supplies and munitions in case of war, Leahy said:

"Russia has carried the regimentation of national forces even further, controlling not only the output of industry but also the daily life of her people to such an extent that they appear to be virtually slaves of the central organization.

"In planning for industrial mobilization in America every effort must be made to guarantee the continuation of our democratic institutions and the liberties of our people with the maximum amount of individual liberty that is consistent with assurance of victory."

Great Lakes Men Fight Control Bill

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt's proposal to dot the country with regional planning authorities like the TVA ran into objections yesterday.

L. C. Sabin, spokesman for the Lake Carriers Association, urged a Senate Agriculture sub-committee to exclude the Great Lakes from provisions of the bill of Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, drafted to put the President's recommendations into effect.

The lakes area, he argued, has no serious flood control or soil erosion problems, and navigation is in the hands of Army engineers.

Nye Fears War, Seeks Army Cut

By the Associated Press.

Senator Nye (Republican North Dakota), demanded a slash in the $663,000,000 War Department appropriation bill yesterday, warning his colleagues "the frightful increase" in military spending might drag America into another foreign war.

Administration leaders predicted the bill would pass today without major changes, despite attacks by Nye, Senator Frazier (Republican North Dakota), and some others.

The measure calls for an $84,485,000 increase over last year's appropriation.

Windsor's Birthday Officially 'Forgotten'

London, June 22 (AP).—The British government, which has an uncanny knack of remembering the birthdays of rulers and potentates has "forgotten" that former King Edward will be 43 tomorrow. His birthday will pass without official notice. The royal family is expected, however, to send felicitations to the abdicated monarch, honeymooning in Vienna with the former Wallis Warfield.

Van Zeeland In Washington.

In an active career as economist, banker, university professor, cabinet member and prime minister, Paul Van Zeeland has participated in many international conferences and gone on many missions abroad. His visit to Washington this week, when he is to be the guest of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House, involves no participation at any conference and is not even official. Yet it can safely be said that, whether ultimately successful or not, his present mission is fraught with more potential importance than any other in which he has engaged.

Premier Van Zeeland comes not only as the leading statesman of Belgium, one fresh from an electoral triumph which clearly revealed how firmly rooted is democracy in that land, but also as the unofficial spokesman for Great Britain and France. For some time the democracies of western Europe, faced by increasingly serious political and economic problems, have sought a way out. They have thus far not succeeded. But on this side of the water one hopeful solution has been worked out, in part at least. Over a period of more than three years, Secretary Hull has sought by means of reciprocal agreements to open the channels of trade and in that way to ease economic pressure throughout the world.

Whether that plan of economic co-operation can be broadened by the participation of other great commercial nations, notably Great Britain, remains to be seen. It is also an open question whether any further action can be taken in the field of international finance over and beyond the tripartite gentlemen's agreement made by France, Great Britain and the United States last September.

Because of his training and experience and the unique position of confidence he enjoys, not only at home but also in Paris and London, Premier Van Zeeland is in an excellent position to discuss these and related question with American leaders. To be sure, the time may not be ripe for any broad-gauged action regarding trade or currency. Nothing but good can result, however, from such a meeting of minds. And no recent visitor to Washington is more welcome than the young and able Princeton-educated premier of Belgium who is also a statesman of world caliber.

A New Crisis Over Spain.

Only recently restored, as a result of the patient and persistent efforts of Great Britain, the "hands off Spain" agreement is now once again threatened with disruption.

According to charges made by the Berlin government, but so far unsubstantiated, Spanish loyalists have been interfering with German ships and not long ago tried to torpedo the German cruiser Leipzig. Germany has demanded that the four powers participating in the naval patrol off Spanish waters accept these ex-parte German charges as valid without further investigation and hold a demonstration off Valencia in order to intimidate the Spanish government.

This demand Great Britain has turned down. There is a possibility, therefore, that the Nazi regime may take the law into its own hands, as it did after the Ibiza incident when a German flotilla bombarded the port of Almeria, killing a large number of helpless men, women and children.

It is now becoming clear that Britain's readiness to close its eyes to that wanton disregard of international law was interpreted in Berlin as a sign of weakness. And with Bilbao in Spanish rebel hands, with France plunged headlong into a grave political crisis, and with Russia's prestige at a low ebb because of a succession of bloody purges, the possibility that the Fascist powers, individually or in concert, may openly flout the non-intervention agreement cannot be dismissed as fantastic.

Hitherto they have shown a willingness to render lip service to that pact, although there is abundant evidence that at no time have they lived up to it. On Monday, Foreign Secretary Eden revealed in the House of Commons that the airplanes used in the attack on Bilbao, without which the Basque capital might not have been taken, were of German and Italian manufacture. The presumption is that they were also manned by German and Italian fliers.

Indeed, the farce of non-intervention can no longer be ignored even by the British government. No wonder, then, that London is again pressing for a withdrawal of all foreigners now serving with the opposing armies in Spain. But if that should happen, it is almost universally admitted, Gen. Franco's goose would be cooked.

Germany's maneuver in spreading a smoke-screen of alleged Spanish government attacks on Nazi warships may, therefore, definitely be designed to forestall British pressure for the withdrawal of volunteers. In the opinion of Berlin and possibly of Rome, the time may now be ripe to make a clean sweep of the Spanish situation by a direct assault on the loyalists. If that is the case, it explains why the prospective visit of Baron von Neurath to London was so suddenly called off. Certainly it would be embarrassing for Germany to have its foreign minister on British soil, engaged in negotiations for a peaceful solution of the latest Spanish crisis, while in Spain itself another Almeria bombardment was being ordered by the Nazi regime.

A Blow To Economy.

Defeat of the Robinson amendment to the relief bill is a severe blow to advocates of economy. T[illegible]enate's action is especially discouraging in view of the extremely moderate degree of restraint that the proposal would have imposed upon the President, or rather his relief administrator, Mr. Hopkins. Senator Borah summed the situation up quite fairly in saying that the effect of the amendment would be to provide that States which are able to do so should contribute 25 per cent and those which are not able to do so may be exempted from the operation of the law by the action of Mr. Hopkins.

As a matter of fact, the proposal involved such a mild form of coercion that it is doubtful whether it would have cut total relief outlays to any extent. It would, however, have established a standard by which to judge the adequacy of local contributions. And that, as Senator Byrnes pointed out, would have given every WPA official an argument to support demands for larger contributions from local sponsors.

Yet this moderate attempt to advise the President as to the wishes of Congress in allocation of relief funds was fought bitterly by Senator Barkley, the Administration's spokesman. He even went so far as to express a pious hope that the floor of the Senate would not be "converted into a theater where shall be re-enacted the scenes of 'The Merchant of Venice,' with Uncle Sam playing the role of Shylock and demanding his pound of flesh from every school district and every city hall and every courthouse and every home in the United States of America."

While passage of the Robinson amendment would not have imposed much restraint upon Mr. Hopkins, it would have had a salutary moral effect upon communities that have come to regard WPA funds as gifts to which they are entitled rather than grants-in-aid to be allotted on the basis of need. The Senate debate showed that many of our legislators are disgusted by the sophistical assumption that hunger and distress will stalk the land if Congress insists that State and local governments make larger contributions to the cost of WPA projects. Naturally, Mr. Hopkins would like to remain unfettered, free to spend where he will. What administrator would not? But that is no reason why Congress should accept at face value his view that the relief program would "fold up" in many places if heavier contributions were exacted from local governments.

The reluctance of Congress to reassume its right to direct and control the expenditure of Federal funds shows how difficult it is to reform bad habits contracted by voting lump sum appropriations. The sectional alarms and jealousies excited by a proposal to change the conditions of such grants are also a warning against breaking down that local sense of responsibility upon which our dual form of government rests. Already the States and their subdivisions have come to rely upon Federal aid as their right—a claim which takes precedence over the obligation of the Federal Government to balance its own budget.

A few courageous Senators have exposed the subterfuges by which we delude ourselves into believing that the Federal Government can keep on borrowing without imposing increased burdens upon the local communities which are the beneficiaries of Federal bounties. As Senator Glass says, the only way the Federal Government gets any money is by "going down deeper and deeper into the pockets of every taxpayer in the communities and in the States in order to meet the maturities of the enormous national debt."

If these truths could be brought home to the people themselves, they might be able to spur their representatives in Congress into changing the relief system from one that puts a premium upon waste to one that offers some inducement to economy. Hope of such a consummation must apparently be deferred, however, for at least another year.

Another Nazi Pledge Broken.

The action of the Hitler government in closing all Catholic public schools in Bavaria is further proof, if any were needed, that in its struggle with the church the Nazi dictatorship is prepared to stop at nothing.

According to the terms of the concordat of July 20, 1933, the right of the church to maintain its school system without governmental interference was specifically guranteed. But in this, as in so many other particulars, the Hitler regime has honored its solemn pledges only in the breach. As Pope Pius XI pointed out in his encyclical letter of March 14, the Third Reich government has "emasculated the terms of the treaty (i. e. the concordat), distorted their meaning, and eventually considered its more or less official violation as a normal policy."

The presumed grounds for this latest attack on the Catholic Church is that in the recent school elections Catholic parents had overwhelmingly favored the nonconfessional Nazi schools for their children as against the educational institutions operated by their church. To believe in the accuracy of these figures is to give credence to the utterly incredible idea that the devout Catholic population of Bavaria, long the principal stronghold of the church in Germany, had committed wholesale apostasy. Knowing how other Nazi "plebiscites" have been conducted, the world will far more readily accept as valid the contention of Cardinal Faulhaber of Munich that the school elections were unfair and illegal.

In any case the Nazi war against the Catholic Church is now in the open and another solemn treaty has been treated by Hitler as a scrap of paper.

Steel's Arbitrary Stand.

Full responsibility for the breakdown in negotiations to end the steel strike rests upon the company heads who have flatly refused to modify their original attitude. Instead of making a sincere effort to iron out their difficulties with the C. I. O., the steel executives issued an ultimatum to the President's special Mediation Board. Negotiation of a settlement, under these circumstances, is obviously impossible.

From the beginning of the strike it has been evident that the unwillingness of the independent steel companies to sign contracts with the C. I. O. has been an excuse to camouflage their opposition to collective bargaining. The real issue has been the negotiation of a binding agreement, whether signed or unsigned. That fact is now admitted by T. M. Girdler, chairman of the Republic Steel Corporation. In his statement to the Mediation Board he declared that the Republic "cannot and will not enter into a contract, oral or written, with an irresponsible party, and the C. I. O., as presently constituted, is utterly irresponsible."

It must be admitted from the experience of the automobile industry and from various episodes in the present strike, that the C. I. O. is woefully deficient in responsibility. But that does not excuse the high-handed attitude taken by the steel executives. Apparently they are determined to thwart the movement for unionization of the steel industry in any circumstances. Undoubtedly that feudal policy goes a long way toward explaining, although it does not justify, the violent tactics employed by various striking groups.

There is nothing to indicate that the companies would deal with the C. I. O., even if impartial elections should prove that it represents a majority of their employes. Nor is there any assurance that the companies would bargain collectively with any other independent groups entitled by the Wagner labor relations act to speak for the workers. To remain aloof from negotiations sponsored by the Government under these circumstances is to flout the intent if not the letter of the labor relations act.

With this attitude there will be very little sympathy from any source. The steel executives have chosen a course that cannot possibly be followed to its logical conclusions. It is inconceivable that the country will permit this eighteenth century conduct to frustrate genuine collective bargaining. The chief question at issue is, therefore: How shall the rights of collective bargaining be enforced?

Prompt action on the part of Gov. Davey of Ohio has averted the threat of a bloody clash between strikers and nonstrikers at Youngstown. In contrast to the biased orders of Gov. Earle in Pennsylvania, Gov. Davey is attempting to maintain the status quo while further efforts to bring about a settlement are made. In face of the breakdown of negotiations at Cleveland, that action may appear to give scant hope for an ultimate solution. It must be remembered, however, that no attempt has yet been made to invoke the labor relations act.

Severe penalties are provided in that law for employers who refuse to bargain collectively with their employes or otherwise engage in unfair labor practices. Let the law be invoked while troops keep the peace, if necessary, and restore picketing to an orderly basis. That course would at least compel both the companies and the C. I. O. to lay all their cards on the table, and in the meantime prevent open conflict.

Knock, Knock, Who's There?

Do you always knock before entering a room? Does it make you feel servile to knock on any door other than a front door? Do you realize that the postman is living up to the very latest rule in etiquette when he rings twice? Mr. Cain probably put that into his story as a bit of whimsy; Margery Wilson incorporates it in her latest book as a fact not to be overlooked by the best people.

In Mr. Wilson's 600-page book on "The Modern Code of Social Behavior," which has just been published, are 16 pages on doors. Included are notes on office doors, theater doors, bedroom doors, and even one on "Any door." Not only is the old threshold question "Shall she ask him in?" settled for once and all, but the well-bred man or woman learns how to approach a door, open it, close it, and dodge it.

Naturally, if you are the sort of person who can take doors or leave them alone, this chapter from Mrs. Wilson's book will not affect you. But the Milquetoast who dips into it before thinking will probably be seriously inhibited by it the rest of his life. For ten to one he will discover that he has been rushing in where even angels knock. About the only comfort left is that the author neglected to lay down a rule for revolving doors. It is still possible, therefore, to free-wheel in one of these contraptions without becoming a social outcast.

Who Shall Build Battleships?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Philadelphia Navy Yard can build one of the new 35,000-ton battleships for $29,000,000, which is less than the lowest private bid of the New York Ship Building Corporation of Camden, N. J., of $55,875,842. The Philadelphia Navy Yard estimate was $36,560,300. New York Navy Yard estimated $37,265,843.

As navy yards' workmanship and material are the best, there are never any strikes, as the highest wages are paid, and working conditions are never questioned, these battleships should be built in the two navy yards.

Under the Vinson-Trammell act President Roosevelt, in his discretion, can award the two new battleships to the navy yards, and in justice to the American people this should be done.

It is a proven fact that the Government can pay high wages and with humane treatment to its employes produce certain commodities as cheaply as private industries, with lower wages.

The T. V. A. and Rural Electrification, using water power belonging to the people, produce and distribute electricity selling for 2 mills per kilowatt hour to towns and 2 cents per kilowatt hour to consumers, yet many of these projects have been stopped by private utility companies that charge as high as 15 cents per kilowatt hour having court injunctions issued.

The Government plant at Charles Town, W. Va., can make armor plate for $264 a ton; yet some Senators believe the Government should continue to pay private plants $610 a ton for it.

The Philadelphia Navy Yard made parachutes for $150 each, yet private contractors got orders for parachutes for $350 each.

I hope the President will consider this is a Nation of the people for the people, and let the navy yards build our battleships and save millions of dollars.

A Male Clerk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several lady Government clerks have recently taken severe wallops at the alleged "creampuff" brand of male who presumes to hold down a clerkship under Uncle Sam, thus breaking the "corner" on positions held by members of the "unfair sex," as Ring Lardner used to style them.

Might it be presumptuous to remind the ladies that prior to the World War the majority of Government jobs were held by men. I have in mind one large bureau that prior to 1917 had one female clerk. Due to the drafting of able-bodied men and the expansions due to the war, the ladies were given an opportunity to grab many good jobs. Due also to the increase in appropriations incident to the late conflict, many inexperienced ladies were given salaries larger than those received by the men whose places they took when the "creampuffs" were being shot up in France. When the men returned, they had to accept less positions in many cases. The ladies were sitting pretty and the men were holding the bag.

Hitler And Mussolini, Too.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much interest in your issue of June 10, a letter from the Rev. J. Kelly, S. J., containing an explanation of his stand on the matter of the repeal of the red rider. Father Kelly in his article strongly condemns the present government of Russia and describes that unhappy country as being a source of all the subversive and tyrannical conduct which now imperils the peace of the civilized world.

Why does Father Kelly omit placing the same charge against the present governments of Germany and Italy. In the writer's opinion, nothing the Russians have ever done has so nearly brought on the castastrophe of a world war as have the recent activities of Hitler and Mussolini. AMELIA HERSON.
Tenleytown, Md., June 13.

The Herrin Affair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your reprint of the Sun editorial on the Herrin affair is an incomplete, one-sided report on a matter which was thoroughly investigated by the United States Coal Commission. The report is Senate Document 195, Sixty-eighth Congress, second session, Part 1.

The editorial you reprinted fails to cite certain facts which have an important bearing on the whole affair, namely, that the mine operator failed to abide by an agreement not to produce coal for sale, merely to clear the ground for strip mining, that union members were discharged by the operator and that laborers were hired from a Chicago labor agency to replace them in a 100 per cent union district. These facts and others are contained in the coal commission report.

The unanimous report of the commission, signed by all its members, including John Hays Hammond, former Vice President Marshall, former Labor Commissioner Neill and Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, presents the facts of the Herrin affair in a clear, nonpartisan fashion. It does not place the blame for the affair on the shoulders of John L. Lewis, as does your compound of half-facts, distorted to arrive at a preconceived conclusion. It weighs the facts on both sides, uncolored by partisan bias.

It is unfortunate that The Post saw fit to reprint this editorial, which like the Sun's employment survey in 1936, is designed to substantiate an already firmly-held belief, by a careful selection of "quotations." It would be a simple matter for anyone sufficiently interested to find a few "quotations" as for example, the verdict of the coroner's jury which found "that the deaths of the decedents were due to the acts, direct and indirect, of the officials of the Southern Illinois Coal Co."

It is far more important, however, for your readers to read for themselves the coal commission report on the Herrin affair. Certainly that report rather than your editorial reprint should be read by "members of the Executive and Legislative Department of the Federal Government" if the truth is to be known.

SAMUEL LIPKOWITZ.
Washington, June 21.

(Editor's note.—The article in question was a paid advertisement by the New York Sun.)

Tax Avoidance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading about the new investigation—income tax avoidance. It is very interesting, but I can't understand why the New Deal instituted it. Most of the testimony to date indicates that the "culprits" avoided tax payments in a legal manner, and the investigator makes that plain at the hearings. Which gets us down to who is responsible for the conditions deplored of? Do not the high priced Harvard New Dealers draw the income tax laws as attorneys for the Government, and is it not true that we are paying $10,000 each to the members of Congress on the theory that they are worth that much money to the country as being capable of passing businessmen judgment in enacting such laws?

This investigation, to my mind, has brought forth a very important fact—we are certainly paying out too much good money to incompetent people, high-priced Government legal talent and legislators. This group evidently does not know its business when they draw and enact tax laws which provide such easy loopholes for tax avoidance as this hearing has already indicated. This investigation is surely making suckers out of Government lawyers and legislators!

EARL REDFIELD.

Fears C. I. O. Dictatorship.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some people do not see why the Federal and allied State administrations favor the C. I. O. and why the C. I. O. can get away with crimes that other people are sent to the penitentiary for. First, the C. I. O. made a big contribution to the Democratic campaign fund. That should entitle the C. I. O. to beat up several policemen and workers and stop one or two mail trucks. Second, the guide book for dictators says that Rule No. 1 for establishing a dictatorship is to have a strong-arm force who are above the law to bulldoze those citizens who do not like dictators.

This rule, formulated by Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini & Co., is the first requirement of any candidate for dictatorship. Hitler called his force storm troopers. They put on "demonstrations," they could beat up people and commit other acts of violence and the law did not touch them. That put the ordinary citizen at quite a disadvantage.

Mussolini called his force Black Shirts. The Bolshevists permitted the members of the Communist party and the Russian G. P. U. to get away with anything.

When the American Government permits the organizers of the C. I. O. to take over factories in sit-down strikes, and even calls out the National Guard to protect them, when bands of brigands swarm over the country intimidating communities, when workers are besieged in factories and attempts made to starve them, when the wives and children of law-abiding workers are threatened, and Government officials stand by and say they can't take sides in that kind of anarchy, then it is becoming very plain that the method which the dictators of Europe used so successfully to bulldoze their nations into submission are being tried in the U. S. A.

Dictatorship is an exact science and has its accepted practices and procedures, and some of those procedures are being used in this country They worked in Europe, why not here? Did not many of Lewis' mine union come from dictator-controlled nations of Europe?

ALVIA O. KIMARLY.

Mrs. Norton's Decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the very kind editorial urging me to stay as chairman of the District Committee, which appeared in your paper on June 17.

I am sure you can realize how much I dislike relinquishing my present post because of my deep and sincere interest in the District, but, of course, I represent a labor district in New Jersey and in all fairness to them I could not do anything but accept the post as chairman of the Labor Committee.

I deeply appreciate not only the editorial but also the continued cooperation and fine treatment you have always accorded me. I know that I shall miss my associations with the local newspapers keenly and can assure you that my service as chairman of the District Committee would have been much more trying and arduous without the assistance of your valued newspaper.

MARY T. NORTON, M. C.

T. R. On Unions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Theodore Roosevelt was President a committee of union bookbinders called on him and requested that he discharge a man in the Government Printing Office because he was not a member of the bookbinders' union.

President Roosevelt informed them, "That a man that did not belong to a union had the same right to work as a union man, and that as long as the man's work was satisfactory he would remain."

Theodore Roosevelt had real sympathy for the laboring man and was at all times looking out for his interest. He did not believe in making it impossible for a man to work without paying some labor boss for the privilege.

The Big Fight.

Chicago, Ill., June 22.—Having seen none of the training rites of the lithe, lean bodies involved in tonight's frivolity at Comiskey's ballyard, your correspondent relies on the judgment of other trained observers of the Fourth Estate who got here earlier and studied both the athletes at their toil. From their testimony it appears that it is not a question of which is the better man but which is worse and that if there were any justice in a cruel world the contest would be called off to spare the customers unnecessary punishment.

Jimmy Braddock, the titular heavyweight champion, has lost about 25 per cent of his fights, hasn't fought in two years, couldn't clinch his fists for rheumatism a few months ago and is beyond the prime of life for pugilists at 32 and easily hit.

Joe Louis, though young and strong and without sufficient imagination to bother his head with thoughts of either victory or defeat, is delivered to the ring in excellent health but is listless, unskilled beyond certain primitive knacks of boxing, readily accessible to a left jab and a right cross and is unambitious.

Louis hits hard, but Braddock, though reachable, is one who will come off the floor as long as there is a post or an opponent's leg to climb. Braddock doesn't hit very hard, but does hit often, and thus might win everything but Vermont and Maine.

So where are we? Well, we are in the lobby of the Morrison Hotel, in a scene faintly reminiscent of the crazy but highly enjoyable mischief and fun ten years ago when Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey were fixing to hold their rendezvous with just a little less than $3,000,000 worth of trade and Tex Rickard, that wily one, was promising to make Chicago famous and a better place in which to live.

The Morrison Hotel, on Madison street, is the headquarters of Mike Jacobs, the old New York ticket speculator, who is promoting the current outbreak of an amiable American weakness.

The lobby is crowded with men wearing dried-apple ears and crumpled noses, some of whom speak in that croupy whisper that comes of excessive dramming but also comes of frequent punching on the Adam's apple.

Kingfish Levinsky is among them—a gay, juvenile soul with a nose like a bare foot, who met Louis himself a few years ago and quickly succumbed in panic, no more to his fists than to the legendary terror of a Negro boy whose billing called him all sorts of killer, bomber and destroyer.

Mike Malloy, whose first name is spelled Mique, is present also and still bemoaning a time when he went to New York and got Primo Carnera's promise to fight someone for him in Chicago—a vow that Primo forgot for better offers to the everlasting woe of Mique Malloy.

There comes a tide in the life of every man, and that was Michael's tide, and he left New York dreaming vast crowds and enormous piles or money and the merry music of carpenters' hammers building an arena the size of which the world will never know outside a fight promoter's dreams.

But when he awoke in Chicago next day the press informed him that Primo had played him false, and Mique Malloy, the rich promoter, resumed his status of hustler, small-timer and fortune's plaything.

There are more journalists than ever, including half a dozen from overseas, come to observe the lithe, lean bodies at war, and the absurdest part of it all is that all have been writing that the contest, as such, would not justify more than a dime's worth of travel and a small item down among the goiter cures and learn-to-be-a-detective ads.

• • • •

The Morrison lobby is "headquarters" and the parlor upstairs is "official headquarters," the place where the promoter provides typewriters for the Fourth Estate and much little personal service in the way of statistics, anecdotes and up to the minute direct quotes from the very lips of the gladiators themselves.

Here in the "official headquarters" we find Mr. Walter St. Denis in charge, one of those old-time but ever-young true believers of the sport industry, long sport editor of the New York Globe and since then the press agent for many stirring dramas of the hempen square, as it is often called.

Ticket speculators, ticket moochers, gate-crashers, sparring partners and broken down failures of the prize fight business, small promoters, managers and gamblers throng the lobby and the balcony of the Morrison Hotel, and the talk is "Wnat do you know?" and "He looked terrible yesterday," and "They tell me 3 to 1, but no money in sight."

This, friends, is the atmosphere and charm of all heavyweight championship fights. This is what they are made of, and it is a joy and a thing to keep men young, so does it matter if the fighters be inferior and the fight itself as art a bust?

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

The Last Conservative

By Ruth Montgomery

WHEN Maria Theresa came to the throne of Austria in 1740 she was 23 years of age. She faced confused conditions both at home and abroad. It has been said of her "No Princess ever ascended a throne under circumstances of greater peril or in a situation which demanded more energy, fortitude and judgment." Maria Theresa had energy and fortitude to an outstanding degree, and though she was by no means lacking in judgment, the times demanded even more of this than she possessed.

A study of the map of her empire explains in part the magnitude of her task. There were many borders to be protected and there was a complex population of diverse nationalities to be ruled. Parts of Holland and Belgium were included in the Austria of that period as well as the Dalmatian coast, territories in Italy and possessions in the East. Other European nations governed by land hungry and ruthless monarchs looked greedily at the patch-work nation and regarded the young ruler with something like amused scorn.

She was alone in a world of enemies. During her long reign she fought costly wars to preserve her inheritance and managed to hold it. She intrigued to foster useful foreign alliances. Her efforts at promoting cohesion within her own country did not meet with outstanding success. But the story of Maria Theresa is not a success story. It is the narrative of a woman who had many things to do and did them in such a remarkable manner that her character and achievements have challenged the interests of historians for over 200 years.

• • • •

WITHIN that period there have been a variety of estimates of the Hapsburg Empress. Her Austrian biographers have idealized her. Some of the others have gone to opposite extremes. Mrs. Morris feels that the truth lies somewhere between the two viewpoints and has attempted in this new biography to appraise her objectively. As a biography, this book leaves little to be desired. It is a comprehensive study of the life and times of Maria Theresa, conscientiously compiled. Though the author has not attempted to handle her material dramatically, she has written lucidly and has arranged her subject matter logically. Mrs. Morris has an advantage over some of the earlier students of the empress in that she has had access to recently opened archives which have yielded much new material. In private life the author is Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, whose husband served as United States Minister to Sweden from 1914 to 1922.

In reading the life of Maria Theresa, one cannot fail to note certain resemblances to that other conservative queen, Victoria, who ruled in England 100 years later. Both of these women married for love and both raised large families. Neither had much help in governing from her husband. Victoria's Albert died young while Maria Theresa's Francis passed into an inept middle age and slipped quietly from the scene in which he had played a minor part, after some 29 years of matrimony. Both queens were essentially domestic. In fact, Mrs. Morris tells us that in some matters Maria Theresa possessed the mind of a burgher woman. For all that, the name of the Austrian matriarch is inextricably woven into the history of her country.

• • • •

SHE WAS compelled to pit her wits against the unscrupulous and experienced sovereigns of other European states. Most of them despised her for her simplicity and piety in an age that was not simple and only superficially pious. Yet though she was in general straight laced, the Empress was not above compromising with her conscience for the sake of expediency. Of her many enemies, she hated Frederick the Great the most. In 1742 he seized her beloved Silesia and though she shed much blood to recover her lost land she never succeeded in wresting it from the northern menace who was then laying the foundations of modern Germany. He remained her especial bete noir all of her life.

In intervals of fighting Maria Theresa turned her attention to domestic affairs. She did much to improve the conditions of the serfs and to encourage progress in education. She kept a watchful eye on finances. In attempting to nationalize her empire, she made the beginnings of the bureaucracy that was to weaken Austria in later years. Her interest in the arts was practical rather than esthetic. She liked music and dramas, especially those which pointed a moral. The palace of Schonbrunn was completed under her direction but few other public buildings were built in her time. Her special interests were justice and medicine.

She encouraged the establishment of clinics in both Hungary and Austria and is credited with giving Vienna the impetus that resulted in its becoming a great medical center, long afterwards. She is among the earliest of recorded fresh air fiends. She was a devoted Catholic and persecuted Jews and Protestants, being especially bitter against the Jews. She must indeed have been a super-woman, for it is averred that in spite of her many duties and her large family, she always retained her charm.

MARIA THERESA was unique in history in that she not only ruled a complex empire, but she was also the mother of 16 children. She has been much condemned for her ruthlessness in arranging marriages for such of her children as attained maturity. Her justification for this was that she hoped in this way to strengthen Austria and expand the glory of the Hapsburgs—two cardinal motives of her existance. Though a stern parent, she seems to have had a warm interest in her children when they were young and in later years she wrote them long letters of advice and suggestions. Her best known daughter was, of course, the tragic Marie Antoinette, who was married to the Dauphin of France for political reasons.

Many of her later descendants have figured in history, though often in tragic roles. Among them were Marie Louise, wife of Napoleon; the Duke of Reichstadt, Maximillian of Mexico, Franz Joseph of Austria and Alphonso XIII of Spain. Two of her descendants sit on European thrones today, Boris of Bulgaria and Leopold of Belgium, while Otto, the heir to the Austrian kingdom, waits wistfully in exile for a call to return to the throne of his great ancestress.

Cecil Roberts Weaves Plot Around Busy Hour in London's Famed Railway Station

By J. E. Toole.

Victoria, of course, is London's famous railway station and 4:30 is the departure time of the train that is to carry Cecil Robert's characters to various parts of Europe—hence the title. Mr. Robert's devotes part one of his book (which, incidentally, accounts for about three-quarters of the novel) to the introduction of his characters, a brief sketch of their private lives, and reasons why they are taking the 4:30 at Victoria. The remainder of the book, part two, depicts events on the train brought about by the meeting of some of the characters and, in some instances, accompanies the travelers to their ultimate destination.

Although a past-master at the art of injecting life into his characters, Mr. Roberts has put just a few too many passengers on the train and one finds it difficult to wade through the 13 chapters, devoted to as many personalities, and still retain the interest that is so essential to the enjoyment of any novel. It would appear that even such an artist of intimate character portraits as Mr. Roberts must tie in a certain amount of continuity if a novel is to be written. Your reviewer, after reading the chapters, "James Brown, of Victoria," "Herr Friedrich Gollwitzer, of Vienna," "Mrs. Dorothy Blake, of Belgrade," "Nikolas Metaxa, of Athens," and "Prince Sixpenny, of Slavonia," began to wonder whether a plot was forthcoming and couldn't resist a peep at the index to find out just how many more people he had to meet. The result was a little discouraging. After all, 227 pages devoted to putting 13 people on a train is apt to place the reader in a rather jumpy frame of mind—wondering if 4:30 will ever come, thereby permitting the train, as well as the plot, to get under way.

However, in fairness to Mr. Roberts and part one of his book, let it be said that, for the patient reader who enjoys meeting interesting persons and who does not require a plot to kindle his interest, there is definite merit and appeal in this novel.

Again in fairness, the aforementioned 227 pages are not entirely without plot-interest. Although not possessing a central theme and consequent continuity, each individual chapter of part one does contain a sort of plot in itself and, without exception, succeeds in arousing interest in the subject character.

For example, there is Mr. Percy Bowling, all his life a victim of mercenary in-laws and falsely condemned as a selfish bachelor. Receiving 500 pounds on an insurance policy, he decides to revolt and live his own life and finally purchases a ticket on the train leaving Victoria at 4:30. Then there is Sister Teresa, widow of a British diplomat and Sister Superior of an orphanage in Rumania, who travels to London to learn that she has only a short while to live and who meets the man she left at the altar some 50 years before.

Next comes James Brown, of Victoria, a young baggage carrier; Herr Friedrich Gollwitzer, of Vienna, world-famous musical conductor; Mrs. Dorothy Blake, of Belgrade, newly-wed; Nikolas Metaxa, of Athens, the little Greek waiter; Prince "Sixpenny," of Slavonia, whose father is killed and whose place as King he must take; Mr. Henry Fanning, of Chelsea, novelist in search of a plot; Herr Emil Gerhardt, of Berlin, brilliant young actor; Mr. Alexander Bekir, of Salonica, rich tobacco dealer; Gen. Zoronoff, of Paris, one-time in command of the Third Guards Cavalry Division in the army of His Imperial Majesty, Czar Nicholas and now a part-time chauffeur; Dr. Wyfold, of Wargrave, in search of a lost nephew, and Elsie Vogel, of Feldkirch, young, expectant and unmarried mother.

Comes now Mr. Roberts' unkindest cut of all. After patiently meeting each of the 13 characters—even some of their friends—and having worked up the required amount of dramatic suspense, the reader meets with bitter disappointment in part two. The long-expected plot doesn't materialize and there is a general let-down feeling when one suddenly meets with "The End." True, all of the characters, save one, are brought back into part two, but few of them meet and the happenings of this latter part of the book fail to compensate one for his patience in the preceding 227 pages.

Summarily, the fault lies not in Mr. Roberts' style or ability to write, but rather in his failure to adopt a more acceptable plot.

Elizabeth Connor Shows What Happens When Love of the Material Predominates

By Mercer Smith.

It is a pity that "No House of Peace" had to be Elizabeth Connor's first novel. We rather wish that she had gained her experience on something simpler and that she had saved the telling of this stirring tale until she had acquired the restraint and wholesomeness which rarely come without practice. The novel is a strange pot-pourri of tender poetry and revolting realism, of tense drama and front-page sensationalism. A secure place awaits Elizabeth Connor among the leading fiction writers of the day, but it is not to be hers until she learns to separate the wheat from the chaff and cultivates a more dignified restraint.

The cornerstone of the plot is the absorbing desire of the Widow Kennefick to maintain the staid and dignified house and family which her late husband has left her in a will designed to keep the family together. Her own child Rex and her step-children, Peter and Mary, are dominated by her imperious will and false moral sense of the importance of appearances to God and to people. They all seek liberation from her severity; Mary marries a worthless small-town physician whom she loves, but who does not love her. Rex, the least suppressed of the three, becomes involved with a town girl. A tense situation develops when Peter falls in love with Rex's mistress. He has just declared his intentions of marrying her when it becomes known that she is going to bear Rex's child.

Mrs. Kennefick keeps up appearances through these scandalous happenings and manages to conceal the true state of affairs from the town gossips. Finally Peter, who is a brooding neurotic and generally regarded as the least important member of the family, is no longer able to bear "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" and brings public disgrace to the name of Kennefick.

The stepdaughter, Mary, suppressed and inhibited, nautrally dislikes her surroundings, but endures them silently until, as an escape mehanism, she falls in love with a man who does not love her. She then masochistically nurses her new unhappiness which reaches its climax when her husband deserts her and she is forced to return to the sheltering influence of her stepmother.

Elizabeth Connor has portrayed her chraacters cleverly and plays one against the other with great skill. Our one criticism of her characterization is that, with the exception of Peter, she has erred in revealing them too clearly in the early chapters of the novel. It would have been better had she permitted them to reveal themselves with the delineation of the plot. In this, she has detracted somewhat from the reader's interest in the action as the effect of each development upon the characters can be anticipated.

Before writing "No House of Peace," Elizabeth Connor says that she wrote poetry to amuse herself and always burned it. We are sorry that she didn't save it, because she has proven in her prose that she has a poet's perception and sensitivenss.

Along with her poetic sensitiveness, Miss Connor affects a realistic style which is often strained and artificial. At times she takes the reader with her to the lofty summit of Parnassus and then, without warning, she hurls him ungraciously over a precipice. In a few instances the effect of this is ludicrous, as in the following:

"She rested, content that this last hour was so perfect. A jeweled memory it would be; when she was old, very old, and with all passion spent, she would look into the past and see it shining.

"The evening was crisply alive. When any noise shattered the brittle air it was caught back again into quietness.

"She heard, from a nearby field, the dropping of a cow—plop • • • plop • • • and plop • • •. It was a strong sound, rich and steamy with peace."

"Please, Elizabeth Connor," I cry from the bottom of my enchanting cesspool, "get me out of here and never throw me in again."

But this must be mollified. "No House of Peace" is a splendid effort and promises greater things to come. It should not be passed over.

"NO HOUSE OF PEACE," by Elizabeth Connor. (D. Appleton-Century, $2.50.)

Philosophy

"PERSONAL REALISM," by James Bissett Pratt. (Macmillan, $3.)

James Bissett Pratt, professor of philosophy at Williams College, has just published "Personal Realism," in which he outlines his entire philosophy, the conclusions he has reached after a lifetime of teaching and thinking. He first claimed attention when he contributed an essay to "Essays in Critical Realism" (1920), the first sortie of Critical Realism against the then-reigning Absolute Idealism. In the present book, Pratt is still a critical realist. A large part of the volume is taken up in giving the arguments against Realism, for both Materialism and Absolute Idealism, arguments often worded so masterfully that his reasoning about his own position appears watery and inconclusive.

Prof. Pratt is particularly unconvincing because he fails to consider certain pertinent discoveries of modern thought, even though he prefaces his essay with the orthodox pleonasm that "the task of metaphysics (is) to come to what conclusions it can about the total universe." In trying to squeeze the last drop of meaning out of the concept of Causality, he ignores the theory of causality of the newer physics and chemistry, that the hit-or-miss movements of atomic particles observe certain averages or patterns in conduct.

Pratt's misfortune was to have been a professor, for he laments that he has been unable to think things through to definite conclusions. The hurrying necessities of our time prevent deep contemplation. Certainly it is this sort of failure that George Santayana had in mind on September 4, 1933, when he wrote the following (unpublished) letter to Miss Jane Hinkle:

"I think it is one of the misfortunes of philosophy and criticism that, in our society, it is carried on chiefly by professors and not by hermits on the one hand and men of the world on the other. Perhaps the ideal sage ought to be both, in succession, if not at once, and since I regained my freedom I have tried to be a nonprofessional philosopher."

Expedition

"NO OTHER WHITE MEN," by Julia Davis. (Dutton, $2.)

Although this is a juvenile, aimed for the 8 to 12 and older, the material deals with the Lewis and Clark expedition in such a manner as to make it very acceptable reading for adults.

Mrs. Davis has gone to every available source to obtain information about Meriwether Davis and William Clark and their boyhood pact, which expressed a determination to "some day go to the wildest place there is" on an exploring trip together. It was not until the two boys grew to young manhood that this chance presented itself when Jefferson appointed Lewis to lead an expedition to the vast unexplored territory of the West; and on Lewis' writing at once to his friend Clark with an invitation to join him, a letter came back quickly saying, "My friend, I join you with hand and heart."

The book is full of adventures and dangerous episodes incident to the going into a country where "no other white men" had been. There is much interesting account of the various men who made up the party, Indian tribes with whom they were forced to deal, and the ups and downs of pioneering in the virgin wilderness. Detailed maps scattered through the book are sufficiently true for identity of locale, and also imaginatively decorative.

Mrs. Davis' numerous other books for juveniles, of historical type, are well known and written with a simple but colorful style, as is this newest addition. This book would seem, however, to have more appeal for the teen age than the younger ages, in view of the fact that the two main characters are well out of boyhood when the story starts. However, the action of the adventure is well sustained, and the fact that it is a "real story" of the development of our own country in the Western territory may hold appeal for the younger child as well.

Magic Of Monarchy

"THE MAGIC OF MONARCHY," by Kingsley Martin. (Knopf, $1.25.)

The widespread interest of Americans in the affairs of British royalty, the events leading up to and subsequent to the abdication of Edward VIII, the accession and recent coronation of his successor, George VI, has been the occasion of a little volume by a foreign journalist attempting to give to America something of what happened, and why.

Kingsley Martin's little volume is no pretentious dissertation upon the essence of monarchy, though it does give you an insight into the institution itself and the manner in which the British view that institution, aside from the consideration of who occupies the throne.

He has done so in language understandable to an American, even if the idea itself is still somewhat vague, and he has presented what appears to be as dispassionate a discussion of the events, their causes and effects as has yet appeared.

Press Agentry

"PRESS AGENTRY," a Practical Handbook of Publicity, by Charles Washburn. (National Library Press, $2.)

The three letters of introduction Lindbergh carried to Paris on the Spirit of St. Louis were given him by a press agent. A cigarette manufacturer, whose product comes in green packages, once spent $30,000 to make green the modish color of the year. In New York, editors handle some 50,000 words of press agent copy per day per paper.

These are three statements picked at random from the book Charlie Washburn, well-known stage press agent, has written to acquaint would-be space-grabbers with the tricks of the trade. This year's graduates may be a little surprised by some of his paragraphs, may gather some good advice, may be a little bored by the lengthy reprinting of old Sunday features with wnich he pads out the volume.

Best advice he gives to aspiring publicizers: get a job on a newspaper first.

'Contact' for Readers

"LOST FLIGHTS OF GUSTAVE WHITEHEAD," by Stella Randolph. (Places, Inc.)

A yellowed clipping from the New York Herald of August 19, 1901, encountered a few years ago by this young Washington woman who is secretary to Health Officer George C. Ruhland, so engaged her that she immediately set about to learn more of this unknown man Whitehead. Now, fully convinced that he piloted a motor-driven airplane more than two years before the Wright brothers, she has written a short book presenting strong data in support of her conviction.

Profusely accoutered with authentic photographs, affidavits, testimonials and newspaper accounts, "Lost Flights" depicts Gustav Weisskopf, as he was known before emigrating from his native Bavaria at the age of 13, as a Bridgeport, Conn., citizen whose consuming passion was aviation.

Miss Randolph submits documentary evidence that Whitehead flew about half a mile in his home-made plane on August 14, 1901, and made numerous flights thereafter. Fortunately, she has chosen a positive style of attack, arguing for Whitehead rather than against the Wrights.

The author, who put more than three years' research into her subject, pleads:

"Now that his flights, long lost to history's pages, are rediscovered, let history again open her records and make entry for Gustave Whitehead."

GERALD GROSS.

"I WANTED WINGS," by Beirne Lay, jr. (Harper's, $2.50.)

"This is not a book for fliers. To them the experiences related in these pages are commonplace. It is a book for those who have not flown—and regret it."

Thus goes the foreword of "I Wanted Wings," by Beirne Lay, jr., and with this general principle in mind he proceeds to tell his adventures in becoming an Army flier in an entertaining non-technical manner.

Perhaps the most absorbing part of his story is when, for the first time, he experiences fear while in the air. Through Randolph and Kelly Field training and in active duty, the Army routine has kept him so busy and under such a strain that his imagination has been stifled. One day, however, when he is some 18,000 feet up it suddenly dawns on him that flying is dangerous!

The material in the appendix should prove interesting to aviation enthusiasts—it touches definitions of aviation terminology, requirements for flying (both service and commercial), and an interesting explanation of the cryptic letters and figures that are noticeable on the tail of airships.

Speech Making

"GOING TO MAKE A SPEECH?" by E. St. Elmo Lewis. (The Ronald Press Co., $3.)

This is one of the best books on the subject of public speaking that has come to my notice for many a day. Not only will it be helpful to those who aspire to become public speakers, but many who now speak in public could profit by the constructive information with which its pages abound.

"Going To Make A Speech" is much more than a compilation of platitudes and stereotyped rules. It is a sound and thoughtful analysis of public speech problems and methods, whether they apply to the Fourth of July oration or an after-dinner speech.

To those who seek fame on the public platform the author gives the advice that if they are not willing to spend the time or effort which are required to make an effective speaker, they would better not try it. On this point he quotes Webster, who said that "there is no such thing as extemporaneous acquisition."

The Pulps 'll Get You

By Elizabeth Ford

HOW is your stamina? What's your speed? Can you write 21,000 words a week, including Sunday? Can you and your typewriter pound out ten pages of double-spaced copy every day, eight hours a day, without a gadget going loose somewhere? How does a rejection slip affect you? Can you drop it, with an indifferent gesture, into the nearest waste basket? Are you willing to take $15 for your 3,000-word masterpiece—if you're lucky? Can you turn out fiction to order? Or do you have to have a solid ivory tower and an inspiration? Are you an intellectual snob—or sensible?

If you are ready to enter the Long and Hard School of Writing, with graduation three or five years hence, then the "editor" wants to see you. Otherwise, you had better save the registration fee.

For the curriculum and required courses, we refer you to Prof. Harold Brainerd Hersey, D. P. M. (doctor of Pulpwood magazines). He will put you through the treadmill in his book, "Pulpwood Editor," and after that never go around saying that you weren't warned in time. You were, and no one will ever believe anything to the contrary.

• • • •

DID I hear you shudder at the word pulpwood? But surely you know what it is. It's a certain kind of paper, scratchy to the touch and cheap as dirt. It flourishes on news stands, generally wrapped in rather gaudy covers with plenty of red and yellow to lure the roving eye. It is always filled with printed matter that sells from 10 cents to 25 cents the package. It represents the largest fiction market in this country. It purveys romance, adventure and cold chills to the unsnooty reader. Hats off! The pulp goes marching by!

Hersey, self-appointed confessor to this brawny brand of literature, got his start right here in Washington (where nothing is supposed to happen) and after a short time spent in the genteel employ of the Library of Congress he wandered up to Greenwich Village (where everything is supposed to happen). There, after starving back and forth between Washington Square and Sheridan Square, he plunged into the business of editing the pulps and he has been grinding away at it for nigh these 25 years.

He is at present the man behind the desk at "Ace-High," one of the most lucrative publications of the pulp trade and at intervals has waked up mornings to find himself associated with some 80 other magazines.

For your inquiring mind, he begins his story (after a brief survey of the reader market) with a worry-by-worry account of exactly how a pulp comes into existence. He furnishes you with unvarnished details concerning the never-ending search for a new and exciting title—a pursuit in which unintentional plagiarism may rear its homely head; then he veers off to the "ash-can" edition, prepared out of odds and ends for the purpose of safe-guarding the new-born idea from lecherous imitators, before it actually appears on the news stands; then he shows you exactly how the budget is worked out—so much for paper, engraving, printing, story material, art work and office help. And then he leaves you winded—but eager for the next chapter.

• • • •

HERE is where the art work comes into its own. Here, in fact, is where you have to be coaxed away from shouting competitors, for the cover of a pulp mag is the key which unlocks your wallet. Come, brother—shed a skinny dime.

The commercial artist who can splash off the most lurid pictures can also ride in the best limousines. If his villain is just a little more menacing than any other villain this week and his heroine just a trifle more frightened than any other heroine, the reader is sold.

And now back to the writers and the stories . . . There's a formula, of course. Pulpwood stories are the most conventional in the trade. The heroine must always be harassed but chaste; the hero must always be brave. There should be lots of suspense and every incident must amount to a minor climax. Give them action—and don't forget that virtue triumphs over all.

Somewhere along the line, you will run into a serial—just to be sure you'll grab up the next issue and the next. It's an endless chain, no stronger than its weakest plot. To quote Hersey, "The reader demands the red meat of invention and the curiously solid stuff of which romance is made." Otherwise he takes his entertainment elsewhere.

• • • •

WHAT about the men who pour out their 21,000 words per week? Hersey furnishes you with a few biographies—chief among them being that of W. Bert Foster, veteran fictioneer, who did always his first draft in long hand and his second on the typewriter and who died writing with his boots on—a gallant gentleman. Then there is a snapshot of H. Bedford Jones, still leading the pulpwood authors. Once when Hersey called on him, Jones was in process of turning out two novels at the same time. On one typewriter he was unwinding a Chinese yarn—on another he was sawing out a saga of the West. He would work at one machine for half an hour or so and then switch to the other and then back again.

In the chapter entitled, "When Is a Pulp Not A Pulp?" you will meet Bernarr Macfadden and his prophet, "True Story Magazine." This, to paraphrase Hersey, though printed on smooth paper and carrying a heavy lineage of pretentious advertising, is still a pulp at heart. And it sells second to none. Hersey, for a time head editor with the Macfadden publications, recalls his hectic existence under the strong man of physical culture. He declares that, except for the serials, the confession chronicles in "True Story" are actually done by non-professional writers. This seems a little hard to believe—but we haven't got time to doubt it now. Macfadden, with his steady fingers on the pulse of mass emotion, is the Colossus of the pulpwood world. Hersey's account of him practically amounts to iambic pentameter.

The volume closes with a word to the wise young writer. And it ought to be framed.

The gentle art of writing blurbs, the rise and fall of the sex mag, the characteristics of the various types of pulps . . . all these are things that we lack space to review here. Get yourself a copy of Hersey's book and

In Search of America

"THE ROAD: IN SEARCH OF AMERICA," by Nathan Asch. (W. W. Norton, $2.75.)

Being one of those people whose first hand knowledge of these United States is bounded on the north by Aroostook County potatoes, on the east by the Wharf Theater in Provincetown, on the south by the gates of Mount Vernon, and on the west by a beer joint 2 miles outside of Syracuse, I am, in the vernacular, a sucker for books on the great beyond.

When I picked up Nathan Asch's new publication "The Road: In Search of America," three reasons prompted me to read it: one, I have an earned appreciation for anyone who has the stamina to travel by bus farther than from here to New York; two, Nathan is son to Sholom Asch, and three, the author sought an objective I have long cherished: the United States which doesn't break into headlines.

The author went out gathering material for a "legend of men's hunger for always, of death every day, little and not dramatic death, death from watching your children so hungry they were too weak to play, death from not having a job, death from seeing someone you love sick and not having money to call a doctor . . . and not in one elaborate, exceptional case, but in ten, hundred, thousand, million cases! in all of America."

Yet he only discovered the obvious. Sharecroppers are hungry and starving while their bosses buy new cars. Boys want jobs—any kind of jobs. Automobile workers fear the police and they fear layoffs; automobile engineers deplore the weakness of the human element on the assembly line.

The writing is heavily emotional and lacking in humor. There is little perspective. The author discovered a hungry America and wrote an intense version of what it made him feel. Some day Mr. Asch will co-ordinate his various talents and will turn out a book we'll all flock to buy. "The Road" is good proof of it.

SYLVIA WEINBERG.

A First Novel

"CAT'S EYE," by Anthony Willson. (Barrows Mussey, $2.)

Anthony Willson's first novel, "Cat's Eye," should find a ready audience among those who like a romantic love story sharpened by a discreet dash of adventure and skillfully placed against the changing background of London, Paris, the Riviera and New York.

The fevered last year and a half of the Great War brought about many strange and difficult relationships. It is a strange situation into which the German Frieda and the American Phillip are drawn as secret agents in the service of Germany.

Cat's Eye is a satisfactory performance and will appeal to the romantic-adventure reader who is not interested in involved psychoses and intricate family relationships.

Palmisano Gets Mrs. Norton's Job as 'Mayor'

Baltimorian to Be Acting Head of House District Committee.

The helm of the House District Committee yesterday was passed from Representative Mary T. Norton, Washington's first "lady mayor," to Representative Vincent Palmisano, of Baltimore

The House confirmed the Ways and Means Committee's nomination of Mrs. Norton to head the Labor Committee as successor to the late Representative William Connery. Members applauded as the nomination was read.

No recommendation was made by the Ways and Means Committee relative to the chairmanship of the District Committee, but it was explained the delay was due to a readjustment of the Education Committee, which Palmisano now heads.

The Marylander, however, will become acting chairman of the District Committee today when the committee holds its weekly meeting. His nomination as full ranking chairman is expected within a few days.

Mrs. Norton served the District up until a few minutes before she was named head of the Labor Committee. Throughout the day she presided over a public hearing on a local bill to control nuisance industries in Washington.

The only business scheduled to come before the District Committee today is a report by a sub-committee on a bill to empower the Public Utilities Commission to restrict the number of taxicabs in Washington.

The sub-committee, headed by Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia, will meet early to draft its report.

Randolph indicated the report will be favorable and that he will recommend an amendment to allow a taxicab fare increase of 5 cents for each zone.

The only school in the city for crippled white children held its first graduation in three years yesterday. Classes are held at Weightman School, of which Miss Viola Offutt is principal, under the instruction of Mrs. Beaulah J. Drake.

The school includes from the first through the eighth grades, but there had been no eighth grade pupils since 1934. This year seven were graduated, of whom one, Marian Belmont Poole, is a charter member.

Other graduates were Catherine Cooper, Charles Bright, James Neff Cline, Charles Bertram Ellis, Locke Joseph Gauthier, and Francis Xavier Lansdale.

Locke was class historian and Francis was master of ceremonies at the exercises. Catherine read an original poem and gave a talk on "Success and Happiness." Charles greeted parents.

The diplomas were presented by Henry W. Draper, supervising principal of the school. Representative John R. Murdock, of Arizona, talked, and the Rev. Dr. Allen A. Stockdale said the invocation.

Liberty Menaced, Dr. Angell Warns Yale Graduates

New Haven, Conn., June 22 (AP).—Dr. James Rowland Angell, of Yale, said today that liberty and democracy in the United States are in danger despite the "dogmatic assurance" to the contrary of "political medicine men."

The retiring president of the university cautioned in his prepared address against winding up with a "bastard democracy."

It was Dr. Angell's final speech as head of Yale before the graduating classes of Yale College, the Sheffield Scientific School and the School of Engineering.

He attacked what he termed the "pressure group" which he blamed for sit-down strikes, among other activities. Dr. Angell also asserted that freedom is menaced by many forces besides the dictator, and said that "tyranny is not less tyranny when exercised by a dictator, or an irresponsible government bureau, or a less responsible labor boss, than when imposed by an economic royalist."

Harlan Judge Fires Deputy in County Purge

3 Others Quit in Protest; 'Trouble-Makers' Under Fire.

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., June 22.—Harlan County faced a shortage of deputy sheriffs tonight following the dismissal of one and the resignation of three others which came as an act of protest.

Deputy Sheriff Lee Fleenor was dismissed by County Judge Morris Saylor. Deputy Sheriffs George Lee, Wash Irvin and Allen Bollin resigned immediately.

"It is time we cleaned up Harlan County and put ourselves in order," Judge Saylor said in announcing Fleenor's dismissal which followed an attempt to place the deputy under a peace bond.

Judge Saylor said he intended to purge the ranks of deputy sheriffs of those who are causing trouble.

Aldon Huntley sought the peace bond for Fleenor, charging that the deputy threatened him after arresting him on a charge of breach of peace.

"We are quitting because we don't think Fleenor got a square deal," Bollin said in announcing the resignation of the other deputies.

In commenting on the resignation of the others Judge Saylor said: "Perhaps they quit before the ax fell on them."

Sheriff T. R. Middleton declined to comment.

Fleenor and Lee are the deputies cited in a complaint filed with the Senate civil liberties committee by R. C. Tackett, who charged they kidnaped him from his home in Virginia and brought him to the jail at Harlan.

Government's Spending Tops Record of 1936

But Reduction Is Probable Before End of the Fiscal Year.

New York, June 22.—The Government's gross expenditures during the first ten months of the current fiscal year, which began last July, amounted to $6,705,000,000 as compared with $6,300,000,000 in the same period last year, an increase of $405,000,000. Expenditures have thus been running at a considerably higher rate than in the previous fiscal year, when they reached a record-high peacetime figure, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. This increase in expenditures has served to offset a substantial part of this year's large increase in receipts, a gain which amounted to $887,000,000 during the first ten months.

The deficit this year has consequently not shown much improvement over that of last year. For the first ten months, the deficit amounted to $2,154,000,000, as compared with $2,637,000,000 a year ago, a reduction of only $483,000,000.

Although expenditures during the first ten months were considerably larger than a year ago, the prospect is that, for the full year, expenditures will not reach the high total of the fiscal year. At the end of the last year there was a sharp spurt in expenditures as the result of paying the soldiers' bonus. This will not be a factor this year. According to the Government's latest budget estimate, annual expenditures this year will amount to $8,821,000,000, or $459,000,000 less than the $9,289,000,000 spent last year. In fact, it is possible that expenditures will be less than the amount anticipated. During the first ten months the rate of spending was less than that indicated by the budget.

Va. Druggists Told to Report Syphilis Cases

Pharmacists Urged Not to Prescribe Remedies for Social Diseases.

Old Point Comfort, Va., June 22 (AP).—The part druggists may play in the nation-wide campaign to reduce venereal diseases was discussed today at the Fifty-sixth annual convention of the Virginia Pharmaceutical Association entered its second day here.

Pharmacists were urged by Dr. Fred P. Fletcher, Richmond, not to attempt to prescribe remedies but to send the venereal disease patients to a reliable physician and report their cases to the State Board of Health.

Clinics established by the board of health for the treatment of syphilis were described by Dr. L. J. Roper, member of the board.

In general discussion which followed these two talks it was urged that a member of the pharmaceutical association be appointed to the board of health and that some plan be devised to prevent medicine intended by the board for charity cases being used for those who can pay.

Speakers alleged that some physicians have taken supplies sold them at reduced rates for treatment of underprivileged persons and used them in treating paying patients.

Other speakers on the program were Dr. A. D. Taylor, member of the District of Columbia Board of Pharmacy, who spoke on "tolerance in the exercise of pharmaceutical skill;" and Dr. James Depree, Holland, Mich., whose subject was "taking the mystery out of vitamins."

Senate Group Calls Girdler On Arms Count

Republic Chief Testifies Tomorrow; Earle Assailed for 'Taking Sides.'

cago State's attorney also will be questioned in connection with the South Chicago steel riot in which nine men were killed.

According to Bridges, he and Senators Bailey, Holt and Gibson (Republican), of Vermont, joined in requesting Girdler to answer recent charges before the committee by Philip Murray, of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee. Murray claimed Republic Steel Corporation was massing arms and tear gas and hiring "thugs" for use against strikers.

Questioned on the strike situation at his press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt said he had no statement to make, but disclosed his constant use of the telephone in the last three days in a personal attempt to adjust differences.

Girdler on Way to D. C.

Asked whether he had talked to Girdler, the President said he had talked to a great many people. Girdler last night was reported on his way to Washington.

Farley asserted the Post Office Department had the right to exercise discretion in the acceptance and delivery of mail to the strife-torn area in his statement to the district court.

The Postmaster said the Republic company was attempting to embroil the department in the controversy, and that, under exsiting statutes, department officers had ample authority to reject any unusual mail matter. Such a rejection, he said, was neither "arbitrary nor capricious," as was charged in the Republic suit.

To comply with the mandamus, Farley said, would require additional equipment the department does not have. Compliance also would expose postal employes to grave risk and danger in making deliveries, he said. He asserted the steel corporation was seeking to use the mails to effect deliveries of foodstuffs to its workers which it was unable to make.

Denies Union Tie-Up.

The reply denied union representatives were given the privilege of rejecting mail that was sought to be sent to the factories.

In denying use of the mails to forward foodstuffs to the loyal workers, the corporation has not been deprived of its constitutional rights, Farley contended.

There is a possibility the suit will not be heard until next fall because of the short time before district court recesses next month.

In a statement assailing Earle for his strike action, Senator Bailey said that with declaration of martial law and closing of Pennsylvania plants, "the purpose of the strikers was accomplished."

"The workers who wished to work were prevented from working," the North Carolina Senator said. "Thereupon," the high command of the C. I. O. considerately called off the invasion. In taking this action, the Governor of Pennsylvania took sides in a strike, not with the workers who were at work, but with an organization which was trying to keep them from working.

"Suppressed Liberty."

Bailey said the right to work is "one of the liberties of our land," and that Earle used the Pennsylvania militia "to suppress a great liberty."

"The only compensation in this situation," Bailey added, "is that Gov. Earle has indicated clearly to the American people what sort of President he would make in event he should be nominated and elected. His candidacy is practically announced."

Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, commented that Earle's action was "a reversal of the whole principle of American government," adding:

"It is a very close step toward complete dictatorship under the force of martial law. Instead, he should have protected property, opened the mills and protected citizens in their right to labor."

George said there may have been "some technical legal justification" for the Pennsylvania action, but he was not aware of it and not prepared to comment on it.

South Carolina Reaction.

Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, just returned from a visit to his home, declared a strong reaction against the present trend in labor developments has set in in his State.

"If reports are true that men who desire to work are forbidden by those who have no authority of law, it is one of the most distressing features of recent developments," Smith commented.

"Both State and Federal authorities should assure citizens of their constitutional guarantees of the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"The right to strike for better wages is no greater than the right to accept and work for wages offered by an employer."

Minton Comments

Senator Sherman Minton (Democrat), Indiana, a liberal in his views, commented:

"I don't think they ought to use the militia either to prevent men from going back to work, or to allow them to go back to work. The militia should not be used either to make or break a strike. It should be used only to preserve law and order, when local government breaks down."

Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin; William E. Borah, of Idaho, and Hiram Johnson, of California (Republicans), said they had no comment to make at this time.

Senator Holt, in his statement pointed to Lewis' contributions to Federal and State campaign tickets.

"That is not the seriousness of it, but when Lewis makes the statement that it is an obligation of the Executive to pay back this debt through use of his office in industrial disputes and no definite reply is heard, then it reaches a point of extreme danger," Holt said, adding "it is time to take the hypocritical cloak off the Administration in this industrial warfare."

House Votes Court To Try U. S. Judges

By the Associated Press.

The House passed, 218 to 126, yesterday the Sumners bill to provide for special courts to try and, if found guilty, remove Federal District Court judges for misbehavior.

The bill, which now goes to the Senate, would set up an "ouster method supplementing impeachment trial before the Senate.

The courts would be made up of three judges of the Circuit Court of Appeals. They would be designated by the chief justice.

Charges would be preferred by the House as in the case of impeachments. The House struck from the measure a provision making the Attorney General the prosecuting officer. Instead, a House board of managers would serve as prosecutors.

Strike Ballot Authorized for 5 Rail Unions

Leader Assails Long Delay of Operators on Demand for Wage Increases.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 22.—A strike ballot, which labor leaders said would be used to press negotiations on demands for a 20 per cent wage increase, was authorized today at a meeting of 150 delegates of the five operating railroad brotherhoods.

J. A. Phillips, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, who announced the vote, said the ballots would be tabulated at a meeting of heads of the five brotherhoods in Chicago, July 26.

Phillips, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, said railroad officials had been dilatory in their actions since the union wage demands were first submitted January 9.

Ballots will be mailed to the 300,000 members of the brotherhoods within the next week, Phillips said.

Strike Not Mandatory.

Fourteen nonoperating railroad brotherhoods also have presented wage increase demands.

"The strike vote will not necessarily mean a strike," Phillips said, "but will be used to force negotiations."

The unions have insisted a wage increase, when agreed upon, be retroactive from May 1. Union officials said a 20 per cent raise would cost the operators $116,000,000 annually and the back pay involved would exceed $9,600,000 a month.

A. F. Whitney, president of the trainmen's group, said railroad workers have received no pay increases since 1928.

4 Die in New Riot In Trinidad Strike

Port of Spain, Trinidad, June 22 (AP).—Four oil workers were killed and four others wounded in a clash between strikers and police today as British sailors and marines were landed in an attempt to bring peace to the strike-torn island.

The new casualties brought to 12 the list of dead in four days of disorders. At least 32 have been wounded. Four platoons of marines from the British cruiser Ajax, which rushed south from the Bahamas, landed at Pointe-a-Pierre and began setting up machine guns to protect oil fields. Another warship, H. M. Unionists Cheer National Guard At Youngstown trip to Youngstown was to discuss with Purnell some of the questions raised at the board's first conference with steel executives yesterday.

'We Have Won,' Pickets Shout; Board Hopeful; Lewis Flies to D. C.

Roosevelt's personal intervention last night, asking Republic and Youngstown Sheet & Tube not to proceed with contemplated reopening of the Youngstown plants, added to the speculatio not the possibility of a White House peace conference.

Cancellation of today's scheduled mill reopenings helped maintain the "status quo" sought by Secretary of Labor Perkins during the mediators' efforts.

It was to keep this "breathing spell," as well as to avert immediate violence, that Gov. Davey ordered out the soldiery. He did so, he emphasized, with the approval of President Roosevelt.

Youngstown Firm Irked.

Irked at the Governor's order, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. said the State must assume "the responsibility for refusing admission to our plants for these citizens and taxpayers to resume work." This company had planned to reopen three plants; Republic had announced the reopening of one. Both promised returning operatives a 12-hour emergency working day, with time and a half for the last four hours.

The story of what happened in Youngstown today was written in the efficient ranks of the Guardsmen, cheered wildly as they left their trucks and trains. The story of what might have happened was told in the seizure of bombs, knives and rifles, in the arrest of scores suspected of carrying concealed weapons, and in the turning back of 2,000 rubber workers who had sped here from Akron to aid their fellow C. I. O. adherents.

Fully-equipped and carrying rations for two days, the first of the guardsmen arrived on the 6-mile re-opening front only a quarter-hour before the 7 a. m. whistles blew—vainly—to summon the men who make steel.

Guardsmen Control City.

In less than three hours, the guardsmen took over virtual command of a city of more than 170,000 persons. Then other ranks deployed down the broad reaches of the valley—to Warren and Niles, where Republic Steel has been operating its plants in the face of picket lines, and to Campbell and Struthers.

Several score men arrived at the four plants here with lunch pails slung under their arms—they were ready to work. For them there was "no admittance." Three thousand spectators watched police head homeward 200 back-to-work men at Sheet & Tube's Brier Hill mill.

They dispersed with grumbles.

To the group of rubber workers, a C. I. O. organizer said:

It's too bad you had to come. We won't forget you, and if you ever need help over there, we'll be on hand."

Sheriff's deputies stopped at the city's outskirts more than 100 cars bearing the rubber workers.

There will be no trouble tomorrow either, Sheriff Ralph E. Elser predicted. He said the Guardsmen would be on duty to the end that riots and lawlessness which have occurred shall cease immediately."

Sheriff Elser, who had equipped 120 special deputies, banned mass formations in danger zones" and ordered picket lines reduced to ten at each plant entrance.

In Warren, pickets dropped their clubs and cut their ranks drastically in obedience to a court order Republic obtained yesterday to restrain their activities.

On another Ohio strike front, the Canton-Massillon district, where about 8,000 Republic workers are idle, Mayor James Seccombe, of Canton, said troops were not required.

Police Sufficient.

"The police department has the situation under control and we anticipate no trouble," Seccombe said.

Republic is operating one of its five mills in Canton, just as it is operating at Niles and Warren. Its plants in Cleveland are closed. No troops were sent to either the Cleveland or Canton districts.

The men working in the Niles, Warren and Canton mills had looked to today's reopening to provide the entering wedge that would free them from their self-imposed imprisonment. They have stayed in the mills since the strike was called May 26, eating and sleeping there. Few have left in the face of picket lines.

The picket-besieged Cambria (Pa.) works of Bethlehem Steel Corporation remained closed. The strike continued in Chicago and other areas in seven Great Lakes States, where approximately 100,000 men are idle in a controversy fatal to 12 persons.

New Group to Fight Park Road Closing

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 22.—An organization to fight closing of the Thurmont-Foxville road that intersects the government-financed Catoctin Recreational Area, was formed last night at a meeting attended by approximately two hundred residents of Thurmont, Smithsburg and Foxville.

Ross V. Smith, Thurmont, was named president, and Rev. Charles H. Corbett. Thurmont, secretary-treasurer of the Baltimore-Hagerstown Pike Association, under which name the organization expects to function. An executive board composed of Grover Buhrman, Emory Kelbaugh, Harry Buhrman, Foxville; Rev. C. E. Wolfe, Stanley Hauver, B. K. Kretsinger, Smithsburg, and Rev. Mr. Corbett, H. A. C. Sylvester and Dr. J. K. Gray, was appointed to formulate a program.

Hungerford stated here that the government will not countenance a main highway through the park area and has suggested that traffic be routed by way of Deerfield from Thurmont to Hagerstown and points west. Residents of Thurmont, Smithsburg and Foxville desire to preserve the present road to Foxville as a link in a new direct highway from Baltimore to Hagerstown.

The Once Over

The Garble Sisters.

"Well, I see where Ralph Guldahl, Charles P. Taft, Princess Juliana and Charles Laughton have been named a board of mediation to settle the steel strike."

"The remarkable thing is that the board has been mediating several days now and hasn't a broken bone anywhere to show for it. What's the big issue, anyhow?"

"I dunno, exactly. I think the steel companies want the C. I. O. to stop throwing bricks and the strikers claim they would do it only it is unethical."

"I never heard so much talk about ethics. Lots of people who always thought ethics was the kind of gasoline that cost 2 cents extra per gallon are now talking about the subject as if they had been familiar with it for years."

"I see where the tax inquiry is all about ethics, too. Most anybody is apt to be branded a great big unethical whatziss. What's it all about?"

"All I can make of it is that a razor blade manufacturer, a movie star and some fellow named Johnstown will have to be made an example of because they managed to read an income tax blank all the way through and understand it."

* * * *

"What's all the shooting for over in Moscow? Every day I read where Stalin has shot eight or ten generals."

"I think he shot the last bunch for letting Jimmy Cromwell take snapshots of Russian buildings or something. I guess that must be why so many Russians are making such long distance trips by airplane, right through the polar regions and everything."

"What's new in Spain?"

"Bilbao and Strabo have fallen and Aneroid has taken the villages of Shick, DeRonde, Irey and Mungo."

"Did you read where Lady Chesapeake announced over the radio that she was going to have a baby?"

"You mean the Duchess of Juliana. Say, by the way, what's become of the Duke of Windsor and Wally?"

"I haven't heard much about them since the Duke granted an interview to Al Smith."

"It looks like a great summer in sports. I see we are going to have another yacht race between Sopwith and the Culbertson system."

"Yeah. That American boat called the Ringer is pretty fast. She defeated those other two yachts, the Sceneshifter and a boat I can't remember."

"You mean the incorporated one."

"That's it."

Ode to Manhattan Transfer.

"Manhattan Transfer, a station in the meadows between New York and Newark and familiar to millions of American railroad travelers, has been abandoned."—News item.)

Farewell, Manhattan Transfer,
My Jersey Meadows queen!
For years you were a figure
In transportation's scene.

A trifle long and skinny,
You were no beauty fair,
But in the storms and sunshine
'Twas good to see you there.

You never were attractive,
But, whizzing by, old gal,
Vast millions found you pleasant—
A sort of desert pal.

Though drab yourself, you gave us
A touch that seemed quite gay
Against the swamps, the puddles
And ash piles wet and gray.

A beacon in the meadows,
A lighthouse in the murk,
A lady up against it,
You eased our way to work!

Now are you cold and lifeless
And now more bleak and flat
Than ever, which milady,
Is quite a trick, at that!

Mr. John Kieran in an interview with Bob Davis pictures Bob as a man with practically no interest in sports, except boxing. What nonsense! Why, Davis himself is the champion open gangplank runner of the world and has been tops at all steamer chair clutching rodeos of the last five years.

It is reliably reported that during that Chesapeake camp meeting a determined effort will be made to have Mr. Roosevelt join the Democratic Party.

Turf Note.

To Agawam, to Agawam——
Ah, there's the track for you!
The races are from 2 to 5.
And the prices 5 to 2.

Secretary Morgenthau wants Congress to "create an atmosphere" in which men will hesitate to save on their taxes even when it is legally okay. This should be fairly simple. All that's needed is soft music, nice weather, plenty of white feathers and the army and navy.

W. C. Fields has lost a suit over a $12,000 doctor's bill. Fields is a pretty good juggler but he couldn't keep a judge, a physician and a jury all in the air at once.

Mrs. Perkins has named a board to investigate the steel strikes and report back at once in case the whole trouble is just a rumor.

Dr. Steward Finishing Study Of Cultureless Shoshoni Tribe

Nomadic Indians of Western U. S. Were Probably Lowest Example of Human Culture in America, Says Smithsonian Expert.

An intensive study of the Shoshoni Indians—probably the New World's lowest example of human culture—is nearing completion under the direction of Dr. Julian H. Steward, Smithsonian Institution anthropologist, it was announced yesterday.

Until relatively recently, Dr. Steward reported, these nomadic Indians roamed in small groups over approximately 125,000 square miles of barren lava plains in southern Idaho, western Utah and Nevada and a part of eastern California.

Burdened by hardships and poor environment, members of these tribes were desperately poor and with a culture that was far below most other Indian tribes, said Dr. Steward.

Struggle to Survive.

The Shoshoni, he declared, were forced to make many adaptions to live at all under such conditions. With most of their physical and mental energies required for merely keeping alive, they had little left for development of the more cultural aspects of life.

"Up to the present," said Dr. Steward, "the whole area has been largely an ethnological blank. Within the region itself there were wide variations. The lowest level of all was reached with the little-known Gosiutes.

"The Gosiute's struggle to survive," he said, "was aided by few material devices. The scarcity of game and wild seeds forced the tribe to subsist on mice, gophers, crickets, ants and lizards."

From the Gosiutes, Dr. Steward found, there is a graduation in culture to those groups of Shoshoni.

Culture is Borrowed.

They borrowed many cultural features from their enemies so that their lives took on much the same pattern of those of the great tribes of bison-hunting Indians of the plains, Dr. Steward pointed out.

The requirements of war proved a spur to invention. Skin covered tipis replaced brush and grass shelters and there was an active manufacture of spears, shields, clubs and other primitive military paraphernalia.

White culture, said Dr. Steward, has made slow inroads among the Shoshoni. They now are gathered in reservations and knowledge of the old ways is disappearing rapidly.

Catholic Unit Studies Labor Problems Here

Institute Session Hears Problems Confronting Industry.

Women from many States and as many walks of life are meeting this week at the National Catholic School of Social Service to discuss a topic of common interest: Industry.

Typical of those enrolled in the institute, which is sponsored by the National Council of Catholic Women, are Mary Warther, Helen Rigsby and Ruth Kuhn.

Miss Warther, who lives in Baltimore, is a senior at Notre Dame College of Maryland. Her field of study is social science. She plans to enter some branch of social work when she graduates next June, and feels that the lectures and discussions on industrial problems held daily at the institute will broaden her background.

Miss Rigsby already is engaged in social work in Toledo, Ohio, where she is connected with the National Catholic Community House. Realizing that labor conditions and legislation are closely connected with welfare, she came to Washington to gain a better understanding of the workers with whom she deals.

Workers Represented.

The workers themselves are represented by Miss Kuhn, who is employed in a hosiery factory in York, Pa. Labor problems are not new to her. But at the institute she is becoming acquainted with the Catholic teachings on the subject.

At yesterday's meetings, the women heard Dr. George Brown describe the development of social legislation in the United States prior to the NRA, stressing the gradual expansion of the fight of the States to control hours of labor.

The earliest labor laws, he said, were designed to protect the health of women and children in industry. The scope was gradually extended to include men as well. Now not only the health, but also the general welfare of workers is considered by legislators.

Lectures Continued.

The Rev. J. W. R. Maguire, continuing his lectures on the labor movement, argued against the contention that labor wants control over industry. Workers want good wages, fair hours and security for themselves and their families, but nothing more, he maintained.

Following a tour of Washington and a picnic in Rock Creek Park, the women returned to the school to hear Dr. Elizabeth Morrissey, professor of economics at Notre Dame College, speak on "The Development of Present Social Trends Based on the Encylicals."

She justified Government interference in labor disputes on the basis of Pope Leo's statement: "Whenever the general interest or any particular class suffers, or is threatened with harm, which can in no other way be met or prevented, the public authority must step in to deal with it."

Collective bargaining, the wage question and the national recovery act are among the subjects to be discussed today.

Rayon Firm Plans $30,000,000 Plant in Giles County, Va.

Pearisburg, Va., June 22 (AP).—Minus details of when work may start or how rapidly an estimated $30,000,000 industrial development will be carried to ultimate culmination, it was announced here through the Giles County Chamber of Commerce that the American Cellulose & Chemical Co., Ltd., New York, has acquired a site of over 1,200 acres between here and Narrows on New River for a rayon plant. Deeds to the property which cost upward of $50,000 and embraces two large farms, were recorded here yesterday.

The announcement follows months of negotiations between the county chamber and the cellulose company. J. L. Dillow, member of the chamber's negotiating committee, said expenditure on the plant eventually is expected to reach $30,000,000

Park 'Squatter' Again Refuses To Leave Home

Mace Breaks Promise to Leave; Eviction Set for Tomorrow.

Harrisonburg, Va., June 22 (AP).—The case of the Government of the United States plus the Government of the Commonwealth of Virginia vs. John Mace, mountaineer, also was in "status quo" today.

Mace, who carried his fight to keep his property in the Shenandoah National Park as far as the United States Supreme Court, promised to move by yesterday if not forcibly evicted, said Sheriff John W. Bazzle, of Rockingham County.

But rather he conferred with counsel, and the sheriff today said he would perform the eviction Thursday under a writ of possession issued last Wednesday in Rockingham Court at the request of A. C. Garson. The latter represents the Virginia Conservation Commission in acquiring the Blue Ridge land before it is turned over to the Federal Government.

Mace refused to sign an agreement required by the national park service.

Any contestant who did not correctly solve all of the first 90 puzzles is unable to win any prize in the contest, in view of the fact that the 1,000 prizes, in accordance with the rules, are reserved for those who are tied with perfect submissions of 90 correct solutions, and the number of contestants so tied exceeds the number of prizes.

If you solved all of the first 90 puzzles correctly and FAIL to receive a tie-breaking set of 90 puzzles by June 23, communicate with OLD GOLD CONTEST, P. O. Box 9, Varick Street Station, New York, N. Y., on or before Midnight, Saturday, June 26, 1937. NO CLAIMS POSTMARKED AFTER JUNE 26, 1937, WILL BE RECOGNIZED.

● Upon the conclusion of the contest, and with the announcement of winners, a complete explanation of the solution of each puzzle, together with all clues contributing to that solution, will be mailed to each person who participated in the contest. Names and addresses of all winners likewise will be included.

Bob Burns Says:

By Bob Burns.

I've noticed that the hardest workers are the ones who take pride in their work. They not only get more work done, but they enjoy doin' it.

My Uncle Hod was the champion hay pitcher of Crawford County. He could pitch hay onto the wagon all day in the hot sun and the horses had to trot to keep up with him. One day I said to Uncle Hod, "There's your brother, who is president of a big bank in town with nothin' to do but sit back of a big desk, and here you are pitchin' hay all day long. Things ain't equally divided, are they?"

Uncle Hod says, "No, they ain't—my poor brother couldn't last 40 minutes at this work!"

Miss Grace Tabbutt, employed by Fruit Insects Investigations, and Frank H. Babers, assistant biochemist with the Division of Control Investigations, received more than a ripple of approbation from their fellow employes at the Beltsville Research Center the other day when they announced their engagement.

Miss Tabbutt is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Tabbutt, of Takoma. Mr. Baber, whose home is in Gainesville, Fla., is a graduate of the University of Florida and later attended the Graduate School of Princeton University. He has been associated with the Rockefeller Institute in New York City. The date for the wedding has not been announced.

Fault-finding: The other day the board of directors of the Farm Credit Club joined around a table and had their picture taken. But why so solemn looking? There was only one smile in the entire group of ten.

Postmaster General Farley is expected to set an historical precedent at 3:20 o'clock this afternoon when he speaks from the steps of a fourth-class postoffice at Stafford Courthouse. According to the postmaster at Stafford no Postmaster General ever has made a public address from a fourth-class postoffice steps. And being an historical address, the words of the Postmaster General should be appropriately embalmed some place. The plum bushes now ripening on the Stafford countryside might be suspected by some as a swell backdrop for a speech on postmasterships, should postmasterships be the theme of the 10-minute oration.

A meeting has been called for Thursday for the purpose of establishing a Washington local of the United Office and Professional of America (C. I. O.). The meeting will be held at the Inter-Professional Association (IPA) headquarters at 808 Seventeenth street northwest, at 8 p. m. All interested persons are invited.

Several days ago 14 Navajo Indians from New Mexico and Arizona came to Washington to complain of sundry goings-on and administrative acts on their reservation. They appeared before the Senate Indian Affairs Committee for three sessions and adequately unburdened themselves. On the eve of their leave-taking one of the members of the delegation, Irwin Morgan, of Farmington, N. Mex., wrote the Federal Diary to send him 20 copies of The Post that contained accounts of their appearance before the committee. "We want it especially for those Navajos who were here so they can tell their people. Collier's Indians out there are saying we didn't come to Washington and didn't confer with the Indian Committee." The delegation came here on money personally contributed by Indians on the reservation. They obviously want to prove that they didn't go sporting off to Atlantic City on these funds.

The Internal Revenue News Letter reports: Fred I. Evans, head of Administrative Division, had another birthday. A large cake with 17 candles adorned his desk, and the algebraic calculation of symbols will have to be worked out to ascertain the number of summers since his first one in Danville. . . .

And the same source reports that Alma M. Misho, the personality girl of Personnel Division, has been transferred to the office of revenue agent in charge at San Francisco . . .

The D. C. Credit Union League is trying, for the first time, a series of entertainments for the members in the District. These will be held, first, to promote closer co-operation between members and, second, as a means to help bear the operating expenses of the District headquarters that have recently been established at 1726 Pennsylvania avenue northwest. One of the first events will be a boat ride, on the steamer Potomac, on Tuesday evening, July 13. There will be dancing.

Another July 13 event: Postmaster General James A. Farley announces that the new Northwest Territory commemorative postage stamp will be placed on sale for the first time at the New York City and Marietta, Ohio, postoffices on July 13. The stamp is being issued in connection with the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the ordinance of 1787 and the establishment of the old Northwest Territory. It will be of 3-cent denomination, arranged horizontally, and of purple color.

Newport News Hunts Auto-Ramming Goat

Newport News, Va., June 22 (AP).—Motorcycle Patrolman Hugh N. Wright is looking for the owner of a billy goat who damaged the side of J. M. Smith's new car. The animal had seen his image in the shiny car, had rammed it until image disappeared.

Traffic Toll Rises to 53; Cab Kills Man

Driver Held After John Quisenberry Is Struck Near Capital.

Coroner's Jury Accuses James E. Sadtler in Woman's Death.

Traffic fatalities in the District reached 53 yesterday when John A. Quisenberry, 55, of 630 East Capitol street, died in Casualty Hospital of injuries suffered several hours earlier when he was struck by a taxi on the Senate side of the Capitol.

An aged man, meanwhile, died in nearby Montgomery County yesterday of injuries suffered June 11, when he was struck by an automobile. He was Emanuel Walton, of 722 Maple avenue, Takoma Park.

Quisenberry was taken to the hospital by George Hirsch, 33, of the 700 block of Sixth street southwest, driver of the cab. Hirsch was held for investigation at the First Precinct Station and will appear at a coroner's inquest. Shortly after the accident he was released in the custody of attorneys for the Diamond Cob Co.

Meanwhile a coroner's jury yesterday held James E. Sadtler, 54, of Seat Pleasant, Md., under the negligent homicide act after an inquest into the death of Anna L. S. Diggs, colored, 37, of the first block of Fenton street northeast.

Witnesses testified Sadtler was operating his car at a high rate of speed when he struck the woman at Third street and Florida avenue northeast last Saturday. She died in Casualty Hospital.

Woman Hurt by Bus.

Mrs. Sarah Howlett, 76, of 2603 Third street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for shock when she brushed against the rear of a bus which was making a turn at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Police said the bus was operated by Frank E. Boteler, 40, 1211 Euclid street northwest.

Donald Cobb, colored, 3, 1722 Eighth street norwest, suffered cuts and bruises when he was struck in front of his home. He was treated at Emergency Hospital.

Irving Mathew, colored, 16, 1805 Marion street northwest, received cuts and bruises when struck at Seventh and T streets northwest. He was released after being treated at Freedmen's Hospital.

Four persons were injured, two seriously, in an automobile collision on Corby Hill, on the Rockville pike, about half way between Bethesda and Rockville, Md., at 4 a. m. yesterday. Alphonse Jackson, 29, colored, of 3113 Eleventh street southwest, and Frank Simpson, 24, of 3701 Chesapeake street northwest, suffered fractured legs. Simpson also suffered a concussion and is in a serious condition at Georgetown Hospital.

Edward H. Cashell, 38, and his wife, Mrs. Pitzer C. Cashell, 32, of Rockville, suffered cuts about the legs, arms and head.

Wife's Shout Saves Man.

Jackson's car broke down on Corby Hill as he was driving to Washington. He called a Rockville garage and Cashell, the proprietor, arrived in a tow-truck with his wife. He towed the car onto the highway and was detaching the chain when a car driven in the same direction by Simpson crashed into the automobile. Cashell, warned by his wife's shout, managed to escape injury.

Mr. Walton, of 722 Maple avenue, Takoma Park, Md., who was injured June 11 when struck by an automobile, died yesterday in the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital. He was 78.

Mr. Walton, father of Dr. Harold M. Walton, medical secretary in the central conference department of the Seventh Day Adventists, was struck by an automobile operated by Charles C. Cooling, of the 5300 block of Eighth street northwest. Cooling, who has been at liberty under a $200 bond on a charge of reckless driving, was arrested and ordered to appear for a hearing in the Takoma Park Police Court on June 28.

An autopsy will be performed on the body of Mr. Walton.

Better Inspection Of D. C. Elevators Urged By Lawyer

A more rigid policy for inspection of the District's 3,000 elevators was urged yesterday by Harry Wender, attorney for the International Union of Elevator Constructors, at a public hearing in the District Building.

Wender testified before a committee appointed by the Commissioners to recommend revisions in elevator regulations. He said the District's staff of seven elevator inspectors is far inadequate to "keep up with conditions."

Elevators in Federal as well as municipal office buildings should come under the District code, Wender pointed out. In addition, he said, stage curtains and theater paraphernalia which must be hoisted also should be inspected regularly.

Church Body Seeks Reforms For Jail, Taxis

Adequate Prison Facilities, Fewer Cabs in D. C. Are Requested.

The District Commissioners were asked to take action to end crowding at District penal institutions and to improve conditions in the taxi industry last night by the civic affairs committee of the Washington Federation of Churches.

On the penal situation Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the committee, wrote the Commissioners:

"Investigation made by our committee shows that there are now 737 persons housed in the District Jail with normal accommodations for only about 500. The overcrowding, serious enough in itself, is not the only evil, because the jail itself is old-fashioned and inadequate. Merely to enlarge it would not serve the purpose. A complete new jail is an absolute necessity. Present conditions tend to increase crime in the District. The situation at Lorton is even worse, because there is not only serious overcrowding, but an inexcusable mixture of youthful offenders with hardened criminals. When Forbush said yesterday that Lorton is a training school in crime he told the truth. Lorton now has over 1,700 inmates with a normal capacity of not over 1,300.

"Will the Commissioners not make definite recommendations on this important subject?"

The taxicab situation evoked the following letter from La Roe:

"The number of cabs on our streets is now nearly 4,800, which is probably at least 30 per cent in excess of the number reasonably required. As a result the drivers are working cruelly long hours for compensation which too often is less than a living wage. Many of these men have families and are having difficulty in paying the high rentals sometimes charged for the use of cabs and have naught left over for the bare necessities of life.

"Furthermore there is a minimum of protection to the traveling public. Many of the operators are financially so irresponsible that a passenger injured by negligence is often without redress.

"The traffic problem is becoming serious, if not dangerous. The toll of human lives lost in traffic accidents is inexcusably large. The flooding of our streets with an unduly large number of cabs is unquestionably a contributing factor.

"The solution of the problem lies, in our opinion, not so much in more traffic rules as in a substantial reduction in the number of cabs, coupled with a larger measure of responsibility and improved earnings for drivers."

Three Plead Guilty Of Stock Frauds

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that W. L. Bridges, C. W. Bridges and R. H. Bridges, all officials of the Atlas Holding Co., of Dallas, have pleaded guilty to charges of violating the securities act of 1933.

The indictment charged that the defendants made grossly exaggerated and fraudulent statements as to the assets of the Atlas Holding Co. in selling stock.

1,700 Aboard Regatta Cruise Down Potomac

It was "Anchors Aweigh" to music by the Metropolitan Police Club Boys Band last night as the S. S. Potomac swung out for the sixth Gold Cup cruise of the season.

A brief flag raising ceremony with its designer, Gladys Fielding, of 1701 Kalimia road northwest, hauling the halyards was the official signal for the start. Her prize, won in competition, was presented by James A. Councilor, general chairman of the association. It was a scholarship of $150 for study at the Columbia Polytechnic Institute.

The salutes of one tugboat and a fireboat trimmed with red lights hailed the ship as it left the dock, while a single searchlight from the other shore covered the decks on its first lap down the river. A crowd estimated at 1,700 joined the cruise.

While many of the guests waited to huddle around a radio for news of the Braddock-Louis fight, entertainment from roulette to a "stupendous" sideshow was offered on all decks.

Transit Line's End of $1 Pass Cuts Car Loads

The Capital Transit Co. lost approximately 1,000,000 revenue passengers monthly by discontinuing the $1 weekly street car pass last January, B. M. Bachman, the company's chief accountant, told the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

He estimated further the company's net operating income for the calendar year 1937 would be $1,651,400—or more than double the sum he calculated for the year ended April 30, 1937.

Bachman's testimony came during current hearings on transit company proposals to increase its token fare from 4 for 30 cents to 4 for 35 cents.

From May to December, 1936, Bachman told the commission, the company carried a monthly average of 10,817,166 revenue passengers. This figure dropped after the $1 pass was abandoned to 9,892,014 over a like period.

During last December, when the $1 pass was in effect, a total of 10,969,132 passengers were carried. But when the cheaper pass was discontinued, the number decreased to 5,043,034 for January, Bachman's figures showed.

Pass users have declined steadily, he said. However, figures showed, the number of token fares increased from 2,842,399 in December to 3,220,275 the following month.

Discussion of a proposed 5-cent cash fare for Washington street car riders was not renewed yesterday. Both the Public Utilities Commission and Capital Transit Co. have agreed, however, to study the proposal.

Suspect Defiant As 9 Identify Him as Bandit

Walter Forbush, Member of 'Blackface' Gang, Faces Accusers.

Walter Forbush, 24, a member of the "Blackface" bandit gang, whose alleged partner in crime, Martin J. Walsh, was shot to death in a gun battle with police in Baltimore Sunday night, was identified by nine persons last night as the gunman who held them up within the past month.

Forbush was defiant. He denied the persons who identified him were correct.

"I never saw you before and you never saw me before," he snarled at Tessie Gurvich, who operates a liquor store in the 1300 block of Thirteenth street.

But Miss Gurvich nodded her head and told police Forbush was one of the two men who held her up and escaped with money from the cash register.

"Why don't you all line up and identify me at once," asked Forbush as he appeared at lineup, dropping the indifference of 24 hours before.

Among those who identified Forbush as one of two bandits who held them up since May 19 were David Rundel, 50, who was robbed of his taxicab in Fort Washington; Adam Luber, of the 1000 block of New Jersey avenue southeast; Fred Roberts, of the 1700 block of Columbia road; John Dade, who was a customer in Roberts' store the night a bandit pair robbed it; Gilbert D. Siron, of the 1300 block of Trinidad avenue northeast; Edward Smith, of the 2700 block of Connecticut avenue; Bernard Carr, of Hyattsville, Md., and Patrick Murphy, of the 3800 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Alexandria Wins Alabama's Praise For Hospitality

Southern hospitality received recognition in Alexandria yesterday.

From T. Jeff Bailey, manager of the Chamber of Commerce in Gadsden, Ala., R. Samuel Luckett, past president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, received a letter praising the conduct of Policeman T. J. Stewart when Mr. and Mrs. George C. Rowe and their daughter, all of Gadsden, spent a week-end in Alexandria after an automoblie mishap which deprived them of the use of their car.

Stewart, who investigated the crash, called on Rowe, a director of the Gadsden Chamber and manager of a store there, and his family, and offered them his car. He later took them on a tour of the city and near-by Virginia.

Bailey sent a copy of the letter to the chief of police, to Stewart and the mayor.

Supply Bill Goes Ahead On Schedule

Tax Measure Hearing Delayed Until Next Week.

Commissioners Favor Change in Order of Conferences.

The District supply bill was given the right of way over the local tax bill yesterday as both measures neared the fiscal year deadline.

Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, originally scheduled public hearings to begin tomorrow morning on the tax bill. When he learned that Senator Thomas, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, had called a conference for the same time, he postponed the inquiry until Monday morning.

The postponement was made with the acquiescence of the District Commissioners, who advised Senator King that it is more important that the supply bill become a law before July 1 than the tax measure.

Committee Duplications.

The meetings could not be held simultaneously because Senators King, Copeland (Democrat), of New York, and Capper (Republican), of Kansas, are members of both committees.

District officials, while expressing a hope that the tax measure will be expedited, said that its passage before July 1 is not essential. They indicated that the municipal government might get along for a couple of weeks in the new fiscal year.

Senator King plans to give spokesmen for civic and trade organizations the first audience when hearings open and to wind up the inquiry with recommendations of the Commissioners.

The District Committee chairman will support the District heads, he said, in opposing the chain store tax and favoring authorization for advances to the District by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Estimate Planned.

Otherwise, the Commissioners have decided to stand by the major provisions of the bill as passed by the House, it was said.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan disclosed that the Commissioners will wait until the provisions of the tax measure are agreed upon in conference before making any recommendations for additional personnel to administer the tax laws.

He said after they have determined how many employes and how much money will be needed, the District heads will submit an estimate to the Budget Bureau and ask that it be taken care of as a deficiency appropriation.

An open meeting will be held today at 8:15 p. m. in the Y. W. C. A. by the citizens' committee on fair taxation, which is opposed to the chain store tax as passed by the House.

This group contends that there will be a retail price jump of 2 to 5 per cent when the legislation becomes effective.

The body further regards the measure as a sales tax, which will ultimately be borne by the consumer.

Enforcement Of Blue Laws Is Threatened

Adventist Cleric May Act Over Sunday Auto Dealer Fight.

A threat to bring about enforcement of Maryland's old "blue laws," many of which have been on the books since 1649, was voiced yesterday by the Rev. Charles S. Longacre, general secretary of the Religious Liberty Association, a Seventh Day Adventist organization.

Dr. Longacre's statement came as he announced a protest against the movement of the Maryland Automobile Trade Association to invoke the blue laws as regards the sale of automobiles and automobile repair work on the Sabbath.

"I feel the enforcement of such a law would discriminate against Adventist automobile men," asserted Dr. Longacre.

The Adventists observe their day of rest on Saturday.

"This would give our men two days of rest instead of one," he pointed out.

"If the association fails to grant our request," he continued, "we have but one course open. That is insistence upon the enforcement of all blue laws, many of which go back to 1649 and prevent any labor on Sunday except in certain counties for certain kinds of work.

"This would mean paralysis of trade in the State on Sunday. Most of the laws are not enforced, but they are upon the statute books.

"For instance, if enforced, they would prevent the sale of tobacco and soft drinks on Sunday."

Board to Consider State Labor Plans

State labor legislation programs and means of strengthening State labor departments will be discussed at a meeting here today of the advisory committee appointed by Secretary of Labor Perkins to consult on problems of the Federal and State labor departments. Building up of State labor department personnel by means of training courses, operated either by the State or Federal Government also will be a topic.

Members of the committee are Joseph M. Tone, labor commissioner, Connecticut; Wendell C. Heaton, chairman industrial commission, Florida; Martin P. Durkin, director department of Labor, Illinois; Carl Mullen, president State federation of labor, Indiana; Elmer F. Andrews, industrial commissioner, New York; A. L. Fletcher, labor commissioner, North Carolina; W. A. Pat Murphy, labor commissioner, Oklahoma; C. H. Gram, labor commissioner, Oregon; Ralph M. Bashore, secretary department of labor and industry, Pennsylvania; Lester Thomas, secretary, federation of labor, Pennsylvania, and Elizabeth Christman, secretary-treasurer, National Women's Trade Union League of America, District of Columbia.

Ex-Officer Ends His Life After Arrest

Captive in Larceny Case, Pulls Gun at Jail Door.

George A. Post Shoots Before Detectives Can Interfere.

Under arrest on a warrant charging him with the larceny of $1,000, George A. Post, 43, of the Shoreham Hotel, shot and killed himself in the rear of Police Headquarters yesterday afternoon.

Detective Sergt. Chester A. Stepp had taken Post into custody at Mount Vernon and had driven to headquarters. Post suffered a heart attack just as he was leavnig his car to be booked on the charge of larceny after trust.

Stepp allowed the man to sit in the car for a few minutes to regain his composure. After several minutes, Post said he was capable of walking.

Surprise Move.

Opening the car door Post reached into the compartment of his expensive touring car, seized a .25-caliber automatic and leaped from the machine. According to Stepp, he said:

"This will take care of everything."

The bullet entered Post's brain through the right temple. He was pronounced dead by a doctor from Casualty Hospital.

Sergt. Stepp said he received a warrant for Post's arrest sworn to by Mrs. Kinkead Hinton, 1945 Calvert street northwest. According to specifications in the paper, Post is alleged to have obtained $1,000 from Mrs. Hinton for the purpose of investing it for her. She charges that she received no return on the money.

Suicide Verdict.

Post has been living at the Shoreham for the past year with Ray Johns, his roommate. He operated an investment office and according to Johns, is separated from his wife who lives in Witherby, N. Y.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Post, whose hom is in Syracuse, N. Y., served as an ensign during the World War. He was in Mount Alto Hospital last fall for treatment of a heart ailment.

Post's record, police said, dates back ten years to September, 1927, when he was arrested on bad-check charges at Evanston, Ill. He later was arrested in connection with a confidence game "racket" in Chicago.

On a grand larceny charge he was sentenced from one to ten years in Joliet, Ill., prison.

Love to Order Part of Game In Hollywood

Publicity Departments at Bottom of Many Loveless 'Love Matches.'

By John Peere Miles.

Hollywood, June 22 (U.P.).—Ballyhooing potential film stars by hurling them into synthetic romances is today the quickest and most effective way of gaining recognition for unknowns. This system was forced upon press agents when the Hays office banned the photographing of legs for publicity purposes.

Thus to the press agents' manifold headaches was added the further discomfort of playing Cupid. True, he is a cynical Cupid, with tongue in cheek and fingers crossed, but he does the job rather well without thanks and invitations to engagement parties.

Romance building, as it is now carried on in Hollywood, is a serious business with ethics and rules. The press agent, steeped deep in the castle system, must remember that a potential "A" starlet must never be coupled with a "B" possibility.

Love Is Out.

Love has nothing to do with this technique. The prime purpose is to introduce a new girl to an established leading man, or vice versa, and bid the couple to hit the night clubs and high spots. Every now and then, when only the best newspapermen and columnists are looking, they must hold hands under the table and look adoringly one at the other.

In a few days the news will get around that so-and-so appears to be very much in love with this-and-that. Under the careful scrutiny of the press agent concerned, this romance will wax hot and cold at proper intervals. Suspense is an important element in its success.

Every now and then true love does make its appearance and when it does most publicity departments get additional white hairs worrying over this unorthodox mishandling of affairs. It may be safe to say that 90 per cent of the film romances are contrived and that 89 per cent never develop more heat than is suggested in newspaper photographs.

It Sometimes "Takes."

Ever so often one of these studio-made romances develops into something more substantial than gossip. The Eleanor Whitney-Johnny Downs romance was started by a publicist neither of the parties will ever thank. They may marry, and that will be a surprise and perhaps a shock, because no press agent wants that to happen. It ruins his continuity and story, and the responsibility is more than he cares to assume.

The Sonja Henie-Tyrone Power camaraderie is another romance that is developing beyond expectation, and both are co-operating splendidly by stating that it is a beautiful friendship. By virtue of their regard for each other they are being co-starred in a picture.

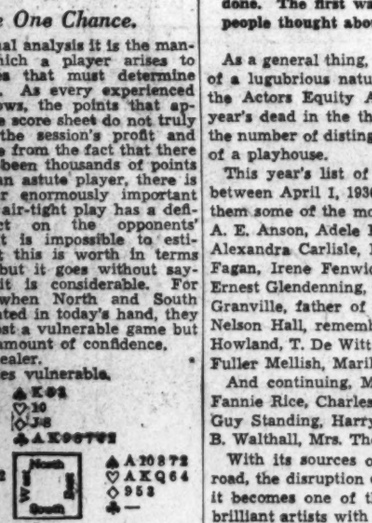
MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

The One Chance.

In the final analysis it is the manner in which a player arises to emergencies that must determine his caliber. As every experienced player knows, the points that appear on the score sheet do not truly represent the session's profit and loss. Aside from the fact that there may have been thousands of points saved by an astute player, there is the further enormously important point that air-tight play has a definite effect on the opponents' morale. It is impossible to estimate what this is worth in terms of points but it goes without saying that it is considerable. For instance, when North and South were defeated in today's hand, they not only lost a vulnerable game but a certain amount of confidence.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♠	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

East's double was predicted on two separate hopes. First, he dared to hope that West would view the double somewhat in the nature of a lead-directing double in a slam contract which, of course, calls for an unusual, rather than an orthodox, opening. In short, East hoped that his partner would have the brilliant idea of opening a club. Failing that, he still hoped to take two heart tricks and a spade.

That West did not sense East's desire for a club opening reflected no discredit on him; it would have been almost clairvoyant, considering his own shortness in clubs. Actually, he made the orthodox lead of his fourth-highest spade. Dummy played low, and East won with the ace.

The singleton heart in dummy was a great disappointment and, in view of South's enormous leap in diamonds, East did not feel a bit sanguine about West's holding a diamond trick. Obviously, then, there was just one chance for success and East promptly grasped it by leading away from his ace-king-queen of hearts. He realized that he risked giving the declarer an overtrick on his contract by this play, but, since any other play was tantamount to giving up, he was quite correct to take this risk.

West, rather to his astonishment, won the trick with the jack, and now had no difficulty in reading East's urgent message. Obviously East would not have underplayed several heart honors (which he must have done, since otherwise declarer would have made some effort to win the trick), except for one reason, namely, that he could ruff a club return. This defense made North and South tread warily from that time on.

Nelson B Bell About The Showshops

Spanish Revolt Is Background of an Exciting Film; 'Last Train From Madrid' Makes Good Use of Chaos

New Paramount Picture Is Nonpartisan and Deals With People Rather Than Causes; Box-Office Champions for May; the Theater's Mighty Dead; News Notes and Gossip of Amusement World.

THE roar of guns, the drone of bombing planes and the crash of tumbling walls come down through the years from the Great War and the motion pictures of its day to "The Last Train From Madrid," the new Paramount production opening at Loew's Capitol on Friday.

BELL.

The background of this melodramatic story, of course, is the Spanish revolution, although the film takes no sides in the bitter struggle now going on in Hispana. "The Last Train From Madrid," as its foreword states, is strictly a drama of people—people of various ranks and stations caught in the chaos of a disorganized State from which they are trying to escape.

Those who attended yesterday afternoon's preview at the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange seemed to be of the opinion that Paramount perhaps has attempted to crowd a little too much into the action of this exciting and, at times, infinitely tragic picture. There are half a dozen couples involved in the treacherous business of trying to get aboard that last train out of Madrid, on which accommodations were limited and over which a rigid military guard was kept. They have varying adventures, ranging from pathetically futile romance to wanton slaughter, and at the end of the picture pull the threads of plot together into a reasonably compact pattern of wartime drama.

The ravages of war have been caught with extravagant realism throughout the length of the story and all of the horror of armed conflict is recalled vividly to mind from the days of 20 years ago. Occasional attempts are made to lighten the nature of the narrative with touches of comedy and a unique array of diversified characters make up the personnel of the play.

The cast is one of the longest ever assembled for one picture. It contains the names of many present favorites of the screen and a surprising sprinkling of older stars who now find themselves cast in "bit" parts.

For those who like their screen drama highly colored, fast-moving and charged with suspense, "The Last Train From Madrid" should supply an enjoyable hour or two on the edge of the chair.

Owing to the requests of those who have found it impossible to accommodate themselves to the afternoon schedule for women only and night for men to view "Sins of Love," on the screen at the Belasco Theater, the management announces that today the entire day will be given over to feminine patronage and on Thursday the entire day to men, both afternoon and evening performances. On Friday and Saturday, the old schedule will be resumed—women only in the afternoons; men only at night. So now you know.

Once again Washington's appraisal of recent releases coincides with the national box-office check-up of motion picture theaters in key cities throughout the country. This is revealed by the Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of the Box-Office Champions for May, published in its issue of June 19.

There were seven champions last month. In the order in which they are listed they were, "Shall We Dance," "A Star Is Born," "Wake Up and Live," "Cafe Metropole," "The Prince and the Pauper," "Fifty Roads to Town" and "Call It a Day." Of these, the Capital has approved of all but "Fifty Roads to Town," which it has not seen.

In the matter of producing companies, Twentieth Century-Fox leads the pack in this compilation, with three releases, "Wake Up," "Metropole" and "Fifty Roads;" Warner Brothers-First National are second with "Prince and Pauper" and "Call It a Day," with RKO-Radio and United Artists each scoring once.

The New Theater Group will present "Help Yourself," by Paul Vulpius, on June 20 and 30 and July 1, in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest. The play is described as "the funniest farce in a decade that knocks the stuffing out of stuffed shirts!" This will be the second WPA success the New Theater Group will have done. The first was "It Can't Happen Here." That's what a lot of people thought about the play, but it did!

As a general thing, this column makes every effort to avoid paragraphs of a lugubrious nature, but every year, when Equity, official organ of the Actors Equity Association, publishes its obituary list of the past year's dead in the theatrical profession, it seems fitting to remark upon the number of distinguished names that will never again be seen in front of a playhouse.

This year's list of those of the theater who took their last curtains between April 1, 1936, and March 31, 1937, consists of 119 names, among them some of the most distinguished of modern players—Alfred Aarons, A. E. Anson, Adele Blood, W. J. Brady, Edmund Breese, Hugh Buckler, Alexandra Carlisle, Frazer Coulter, Robert Dalton, Ida Darling, Barney Fagan, Irene Fenwick, wife of Lionel Barrymore; Daniel T. Frawley, Ernest Glendenning, former Washington stock favorite; Bernard "Bunny" Granville, father of Bonita Granville, child actress of the films; Laura Nelson Hall, remembered from "Everywoman;", George Hassell, Jobyna Howland, T. De Witt Jennings, Lois Long, Richie Ling, Thomas Meighan, Fuller Mellish, Marilyn Miller, John Miltern.

And continuing, Maude Odell, Frederick Perry, Fannie Addison Pitt, Fannie Rice, Charles "Chic" Sale, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Sir Guy Standing, Harry Vokes, of the old team of Ward & Vokes; Henry B. Walthall, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen and Tammany Young.

With its sources of supply seriously depleted by the collapse of the road, the disruption of vaudeville and the virtual disappearance of stock, it becomes one of the major problems of the theater to replace these brilliant artists with rising new talent. It is a problem of the first water.

Personal aside to Miss Elizabeth D. McGee, 411 Altamount Circle, Charlottesville, Va.: I deeply appreciate your letter of June 21, but be wary of driving all the way to Washington to see pictures on my say so. It might not work a second time.

Keep Your Hand on Your "Roll"!

This ominous-looking gentleman is a friendly fellow who hovers over his "pinch wheel" and fleeces both friends and foes. He doesn't care for roulette because his major game is the slot-machine racket. The gentleman is Akim Tamiroff, who plays the title role in Paramount's production of "King of Gamblers."

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, June 22.—Personal Observations: For a guy with so much muscle, George O'Brien is rather decent about handshakes. Clark Gable tucks one foot under him while talking to a pal. Guess the term "parted lips" must have impressed Mae West; she never closes hers when listening to a gentleman. Only time Paul Muni beams with pleasure is when he is being referred to as a great actor. Men who used to copy John Barrymore's flowing collars have swung to George Raft's close-fit style.

JACK OAKIE.

Veree Teasdale's social attitude is aptly described by her first name. Pat O'Brien's wife is a perfect audience for his jokes; she always leads the laugh. Too much weight under the chin isn't going to add any weight to Ian Hunter's popularity with the ladies. With one hair out of place, Ricardo Cortez looks positively unkempt. Director William K. Howard has the only "James" in Hollywood's chauffeur lists. All of Franchot Tone's shoes are solid leather across the instep, no laces to break.

George Raft gives the back of his neck a "turkish towel rub" with his silk scarf during important conferences. Marlene Dietrich never gives the impression that she knows she has a gorgeous figure—much! Most actors who play golf dress the role, but rarely fill it. Jack Oakie slouches so far down at the table that he could almost eat "no-hands." Billie Burke never flutters except on the screen, thank heaven.

Clark Gable was having himself a bachelor evening down in the Mexican quarter when I caught up with him. Of course, the lovely Spanish dancer, Estalita, was gaga at sight of Hollywood's No. 1 lover. You should have seen her face when Gable asked her to sit at our table. "Are you from Mexico City?" Clark asked, just to be friendly.

"Oh, no! I'm from California, Estalita beamed.

"I've always wanted to shake the hand of a native daughter," said Gable, suiting the words to the action.

"In fact," the girl added, "I was born right here in Los Angeles." At that, Gable leaned across the table with "Now that calls for something more than a handshake," and kissed her gingerly on the forehead. Estalita was beside herself with joy, but she was thinking fast. Suddenly she said coyly:

"Yes, I was born just around the corner!"

For months I have been intending to look up Roscoe Ates. From one of the most prominent character men, he dropped into oblivion without a trace. Now I have the story: Ates, you will remember, was famous for his stuttering act. But what had been his meal ticket became his "pink slip" when the Motion Picture Academy began receiving hundreds of letters reporting that school kids were developing impediments of speech. They were trying to imitate Ates' halting speech.

Had lunch with Una Merkel (one of my favorite comediennes) and found her doleful. She is tired, she says, of being comedy relief in every picture. She thinks the studio should reward her years of faithful service by letting her have at least one grand screen romance. Preferably (she sighed) with Bob Taylor or Gary Cooper. "I had high hopes for my next picture," she sighed, "but when they handed me the script, I discovered I'm to be the wife of a character named: Jeffie Kiffmeyer.

Japan Restores Ministers.

Tokyo, June 22 (AP).—The Japanese cabinet decided today to restore the system of parliamentary vice ministers in the various government departments. Twenty-four will be chosen from the members of the House of Representatives in the move to gain political support for Prince Fuminaro Konoye's cabinet.

12 P. M. "Who's that guy who looks like a Typical Yokel?" a barstandee at "21" asks his companion. The "Typical Yokel"—wearing tan, country shoes, white flannel trousers and a hick jacket—is H. L. Mencken! . . . "I flew in from Hollywood tonight, and I'm flying back in the morning," Earl Carroll confides at the Paradise. "I came East to see this one number in the show here." . . . Willie Howard exits from the Winter Garden—agreeing to appear in "The Show Is On," after the present principals leave for Hollywood . . . "I won this bet from Red Murray," Yonno Cooke explains at Moore's. "We played golf at Lakeside, but I agreed to throw the ball around the 18 holes. Red spotted me 20, and I went around in 115." . . . I just saw 'Kid Galahad,' and cried like a baby," Sam Harris confesses. "It reminded me of the days when I managed Terry McGovern." . . . "Well, s'help me," Ben Bernie admits. "I'm taking Drama Lessons—from Philip Loeb. I'm paying him to teach me!"

1 A. M. "My first appearance on the stage was with Gus Edwards," Mitzi Green relates at the Versailles. "I sat on his lap and took a bow. He paid me 2 cents a performance then . . . Well, he asked me to play a benefit show recently, and I did. So look at the present he sent me." Mitzi exhibits two pennies—set in a brooch . . . Albert Feltman, the Coney Island hot-dog king, mounts the band stand and whistles an accompaniment to Harry Rosenthal's excellent music . . . Upstairs at the Tavern, Songwriter Teddy Powell tenders a party for Ruth Greelig and 20 chorines from "The Show Is On."

3 A. M. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess Meredith start to enter the Glen Island Casino. "You must wear a tie," the sport-attired actor is warned. "Won't you try one of our waiters' ties?" . . . Meredith spurns the offer. Instead, he borrows his wife's red scarf, wraps it around his throat, and orders lobster and ice cream. "But ice cream is no good after lobster," the waiter warns. "Yeah?" Meredith returns. "Double-order then. Chocolate" . . . At the No. 1 Bar Ethel Levy, ex-wife of George M. Cohan, sits with Mary and G. M. Cohan, jr. . . . "Y'know," Ethel informs, "this is the first time I've met George's son" . . . "Just before Jimmy Cromwell left Russia," a socialite informs at the Ambassador, "he sent Stalin an autographed copy of his new book, 'In Defense of Capitalism'" . . . "Columbia University," a sports writer whispers at Bertolotti's, "will play Minnesota University here in 1940. The contract was just signed."

4 A. M. "This man comes into our store," a Broadway victrola shop proprietor confides at the Caliente, "and wants us to dub in two dirty lines in our recording of the Duke of Windsor's abdication speech. He paid us $3,000 for his copy, and then broke the master record" . . . "I'm here to buy an American plane," Beryl Markham whispers at the Savoy-Plaza, "but don't ask me what I'm going to do with it. I have to ask my backers first" . . . At the Rainbow Room, built with Rockefeller money, Mrs. David Milton—the former Abby Rockefeller—stares at a marionette doing a Gypsy Rose Lee strip-tease and sighs wearily.

5 A. M. Two 6-footers station themselves at the doorway of Roseland, throw punches at passers-by, and then hurl the chewing gum package from a beggar's hands. A husky stranger kayoes both with one punch each. "Get up now," he directs, "and show me how tough you are" . . . He's Johnnie Broderick.

6 A. M. "Look up Maj. Herbert O. Yardley, the American code expert during the war," a detective tips at Mori's. "He's making a fortune applying secret-service methods to Long Island real estate. Find out the connection" . . . "And so this director of the Rochester Stock Co. came to George Abbott," Pat Rooney reminisces at Leon & Eddie's, "and Abbott wanted him to change his name. He said 'I won't. I'll make people remember it.' His name? Rouben Mamoulian" . . . "Those Germans have no sense of humor," Jimmie Savo sighs. "I just came from Berlin. On the stage there I started doing my satire on the card-trickster. But they didn't get it. From the audience they yelled 'Stop practicing'" . . . Joseph Gollomb, the mystery writer," an editor relates at Tony's, "will publish a new Pulp Magazine. It'll have a labor angle."

Cooper Plays Lead In Romantic Film

Hollywood, June 22.—Samuel Goldwyn today signed H. B. Warner and Robert Grieg for supporting roles in Gary Cooper's new starring picture, "The Adventures of Marco Polo." Warner, who recently appeared in "Lost Horizon," will be featured as "Chen Tsu," while Grieg will play the part of the chamberlain. Sigrid Gurie, Ernest Truex, John Carradine, George Barbier, Alan Hale and Veree Teasdale are also in the cast.

"The Adventures of Marco Polo," a thirteenth century romance, is being directed by John Cromwell from the screen play by Robert E. Sherwood.

Helen Forrest Thrills Patrons At Madrillon

Diminutive Singer Scores Hit; Ennui Cured at Brinkley's.

By Chanticleer

Dropped into the Madrillon the other p. m., and wouldn't have believed it if our own eyes hadn't witnessed it. The orchestra, under Chonnie Shaw, was a'swinging and little lass, Helen Forrest, all prettied-up with a new coiffure, was pouring her song into the "mike". Everything was as it should be . . . some couples sittin'-this-one-out and others dancing over the floor . . . when . . . flash . . . just like that . . . a dancing pair stopped twirling . . . and dashed over to where Helen stood . . . pulled-up a chair . . . a couple of 'em . . . and remained spell-bound 'til Miss Forrest completed her song. She sure had some affect on this couple. Gosh.

Hugh Barteman, cellist with the Madrillonians, has returned from his vacation and is banging out swing once again with his buddies. Johnny Shaw is going to New York soon to get the latest on "swing."

Gather 'round you lads and lassies who are forever in search of new things to do and new and interesting places to go. This is about Brinkley's, located at 533 Eighth street in Southeast Washington. Brinkley's features the best in dining and dancing. This spot deserves the attention of all you good people who want to discover a sure cure for ennui (wow).

Hilarity Promised.

The Lotus will feature on this week's entertainment bill the smart comedy skit of Sonya and Romero. Plenty of action and hilarity are promised. Betty De..n introduces something new called an Egyptian acrobatic. Should be worth while watching . . . new, anyway. Pat Brinson is featured in a "Jazz Revel" that will be a highlight. Bill Strickland and his Capitolian Orchestra plays during lunch, dinner and late supper, and features the singing of pretty Marion Dawn. There are three shows daily, at 1 p. m., 7:30 p. m. and 11:30 p. m. It's plenty cool up at the Lotus and never a cover charge.

Now, in addition to wining, dining and dancing at the Rainbow Room, at the Hamilton, you may have your handwriting analyzed, too. Miss Katherine de Jersey, scriptologist, can look at your handwriting and zippo . . . she'll tell you all about your character, personality, vocation and where you were last night.

The latest addition to the alphabetical organizations, which have been created in Washington during the New Deal regime . . . is the MMM . . . or, the Three M's. The letters stand, respectively, for Melody, Mirth and Music. Anyway, these boys, who are featured at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat, continue to please the customers.

His name is "Red" . . . and he is the wine steward at the Shoreham. Red has evolved a new drink out of his years of experience in the "mixing" business and wants everybody to know about it.

Return to Capital.

"Please, please," Red pleaded, "pretty please tell everybody, for their own enjoyment to come out and try the "Red" special."

He uses raspberry gin, mint julep and lime juice. So now you know, too.

Out at the Terrace of the Shoreham, the Three Yates Sisters, and their picture is on this page, are entertaining the guests. The Yates girls recently have returned to Washington, where they have long been our bestest favorites. Avila and Nile remain with the Terrace for just a little while longer.

Our secret operator says she has "rippling eyes" . . . he was telling us about Joan English, the attractive young lady who sings your favorite songs at the King Cole room at the Claridge . . . have to look into that . . . This young lady combines a talent for song and a brand of personality that makes the complete product a living example of "a thing of beauty being a joy forever."

Then there is Jack Campbell and Leo Lisee, those two perennial masters of song around the corner at the Mayfair. The way those boys bow and beam at the audience . . . they feel particularly good . . . these hot days . . . don't call that work at all . . . air-cooled . . . they seem to laugh at everybody . . . 'cause they know that the poor little customers'll have to go out into the hot streets again . . . bet they sleep down in the Mayfair.

On Richmond Pike.

If you haven't discovered the Nightingale yet, now is the time for you to do so. Located 3 miles out of Alexandria, on the Richmond highway. Here, in the spacious interior of the nightery, the patrons are discovering, too, the immense floor (incidentally, one of the largest in this vicinity), to be just the thing for their individual expressions of the dance as they interpret it to the music of Jack Hawley and his boys. Our little spy reported a fine evening at this spot recently and is champing at the bit for a return visit.

The wise ones who forsake the city for the coolness that seems to be a permanent guest of the Boulevard Farms are highly amazed at the sight of "Little" Coke Homan (280 pounds), ambling blithely onto the floor and going into what should be (but is not) a poundage reducing tap dance. The Parker Sisters offer unique dance routines on the interesting bill and the tasty bill of fare (their chicken dinners are fast becoming famous) more than aids in making a visit to Boulevard Farms something that should not be missed.

Back 40-Hr. Week.

Geneva, June 22 (AP).—The international labor conference today adopted a resolution recommending a 40-hour week in the textile industry. The resolution passed, 88 to 41, with United States delegates leading the fight for its adoption. Similar resolutions for the printing and chemical industries failed to obtain the necessary two-thirds majorities.

3 Lobbyists Leave.

By the Associated Press.

Three sugar lobbyists were seen leaving town yesterday, President Roosevelt reported. He added that it was a good sign. Last week, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters that a pernicious lobby was retarding sugar tax legislation and said the lobbyists should leave.

C. I. O. Charter Granted to New Federal Group

Baker, Union Chiefs Confer on Drive to Enroll U. S. Workers.

Jacob Baker, who gave up a $9,500 a year job as assistant administrator of WPA to become president of the provisional organization of the United Federal Workers of America, yesterday witnessed the first fruits of routine organization in the awarding of a charter to the new Government personnel group by the C. I. O.

Conferences between Baker and the C. I. O. heads yesterday dealt with setting up offices for the new organization and the recruiting of members in Washington and throughout the United States. As many as 20 organizers may be sent into the field.

The nucleus is estimated at between 3,200 and 4,300, in 17 lodges, previously the liberal wing of the American Federation of Government Employes. These lodges, either suspended, ousted or withdrawn from the A. F. G. E., sought admission to the Lewis labor faction. They claim some support from lodges in the field.

Aware of the invasion of the Government field by the C. I. O., leaders of the older organizations generally remained silent. Col. Charles I. Stengle, president of the A. F. G. E., yesterday said he was "minding his own business," and Luther Steward, president of the National Federation of Government Employes, said his group has known no issue since its split with the American Federation of Labor.

The United Federal Workers of America have not indicated how strongly they may go after members of the older organizations. Steward claims 70,000 members for the N. F. F. E., and the A. F. G. E. claims approximately 25,000. Most of these are old-line Civil Service employes, regarded as conservatives.

The U. F. W. A. will accept as members, "All Federal employes, except executives with authority to hire or discharge, members of the military and, for the time being, postal employes." Under this policy there is a wide recruiting field, which does not mention leaving members of the older organizations alone.

Dog owners may obtain licenses at the District Building beginning July 1, it was announced yesterday. The tags will cover the new fiscal year.

Father-Son Team Arrest Same Man 30 Years Apart!

Thirty years ago Roy L. Miller, 47, of Alexandria, Va., was arrested on a traffic charge by Policeman Vincent Osterman.

Several days ago he was arrested the second time by Policeman Joseph V. Osterman, son of Vincent.

Miller was fined $5 on a charge of speeding 40 miles an hour on the Highway Bridge, in Police Court.

"You know," he told Osterman, "30 years ago—the only other time I was arrested—the policeman's name was Osterman, too."

"That must have been my father," Joseph V. replied.

A search of the records showed it was Vincent Osterman who arrested Miller.

Oklahoma City, June 22 (AP).—Leland J. Lakes, "last man" in the Oklahoma Penitentiary death row, won a 30-day reprieve today from Gov. E. W. Marland 48 hours before he was to die for the slaying of Arthur Heenan, former Ardmore oil man.

Two sisters of the prisoner, Mrs. Park Hill, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. George Brett, of Norfolk, Va., visited Marland yesterday to plead for clemency.

Organizations of the communities will enter floats in the parade which opens the celebration. A patriotic meeting will be held immediately afterward.

In the afternoon, the field day will be held. A 10-mile marathon and swimming events will be featured. The climax of the celebration will be a fireworks display at Takoma Park (D. C.) Recreation Center.

E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, had been retained previously by the utility.

Verdict Due Today In Assault Trial

Elmer Fulk and Alonzo Turner, on trial in District Court on charges of criminally attacking and killing Mrs. Mary Maier in a Southwest Washington woodshed June 6, 1936, will learn tonight the jury's verdict, it was believed yesterday when most of the prosecution witnesses had told their story of the affair to an all-male jury.

Government witnesses yesterday told the story of how Turner, 33, allegedly chased Mrs. Maier from her home on Independence avenue on the pretext he was a detective. He seized her at a nearby woodshed and criminally attacked her, it was testified. Fulk, 39, was involved in the case through the testimony of small boys who testified they saw him emerge from the shed where the unconscious Mrs. Maier later was found. She died three days later in Gallinger Hospital.

Richmond, Va., June 22 (AP). Gov. Peery said today he saw "no reason" to delay the appointment of a chairman of the State game commission after two delegations of Virginia sportsmen had appeared to oppose the reappointment of Commissioner Carl H. Noting, whose term expires July 1.

The Governor said he would be glad to hear the views of other associations on the matter "within a reasonable time." By "reasonable time" the Governor said he meant any time between now and July 1.

A specific request for a three-month delay in making the appointment was denied.

From Coast to Coast

Tom McCarthy

TOM McCARTHY, who, for the past several months, has conducted the Postilion broadcasts of The Washington Post over Station WMAL, left the Nation's Capital a few days ago and . . . with ten dollars in the pockets of an old pair of trousers, a battered brown hat on his head and a knapsack on his back . . . started out for the Pacific Coast.

THE WASHINGTON POST has no idea of how long the trip will take him, an even more uncertain idea of the route he will select, and no idea at all of what he will do and whom he will see on the way.

VERY VAGUELY indeed, his purpose is just to see what some of these United States of ours, between the District of Columbia and the State of California, look like . . . to talk with and live and work, in spasms, among the people in their towns, villages and large cities, on their farms and in their mines and stores and factories . . . and to report, in a series of informal articles written from day to day, on the way, the things he sees and hears and feels.

TOM McCARTHY'S articles will begin in The Washington Post, Monday, June 27. If you are familiar with his work over the air, you probably won't want to miss a single story in the series. And if you're not already a regular subscriber to The Washington Post, a telephone call to NAtional 4200 today will start carrier home delivery at your door tomorrow morning.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 22.

I DECLARE to goodness, if these pretty young college girls don't stop taking practically all their clothes off and posing for pictures, all of us must entertain grave doubts about the Future, or even the Present, of the Race!

ALICE HUGHES.

First, it was Heloise Martin, that cutie out at Drake, in Des Moines, who got in a jam by being cameraed in her shower. She came back to Broadway and recently married her campus crush, and will probably fade gently from the public ken, which is all right, too. Now it's 19-year-old Jean Brand, who became involved in a photographic mess at the little Maryland College for Women, in the town of Lutherville.

As might be expected, La Brand is here now, asking interviewers if they think she is pretty enough to get a job on the stage. Most of them tell her she is—and she has not been loath to unveil herself somewhat for newspaper photographers while waiting for managers to rush up to her hotel suite with blank contracts.

Gosh knows I'm the first to realize and admit that there's a new spirit of freedom on the Nation's campuses these days. I suppose it's Modern, the most misused word of our era. But I don't think these overcandid camera shots of the cute co-eds serve any good purpose. They only cheapen the girls—and send the country's Deans of Women into servere nervous declines. Let's hope the thing doesn't get any more epidemic, or what price Brooks sweaters?

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Tallulah Bankhead, the Alabama Flash, is back in town after her most successful stage season in years, and tells me that she is going to retire to the rocky hills of Connecticut for the summer. After restoring worn tissues, she will go to work in "Antony and Cleopatra" next fall. Incidentally, Talloo says she and her boss are still looking for a handsome rascal to play Antony. They've already signed the asp.

• • • •

Estelle Winwood, our veteran young actress, is still chuckling. She went to Hollywood to play Garbo's mother in the Swede's new film, but the moguls found that she photographed much too young! So, even though she lost a good job, Estelle is giggling, and why not?

• • • •

We barely got a glimpse of pretty young Patricia Ellis, the film child. She practically ran through the heart of town to catch the Queen Mary for an overseas holiday. Pat comes naturally by her trouping, for her pappy is Alexander Leftwich, long a famed producer of musical comedies, when there were such things.

New Ideas for Summer Meals Given by Recipe Contest Winners

Baked Meat Loaves, Jellied Liver Loaves, Meat Salads and Cold Meats Make Hot-Weather Table Attractive.

By Rebekah Blake.

DON'T BURDEN your family with hot, heavy roasts and chops in this summer's meals, when there are so many light meals to be prepared. And these may be made so colorful they will make any summer table more attractive.

The Post recipe contest for summer meats brought in new ideas for baked meat loaves, jellied liver loaves, meat salads, stuffed, cold meats and many other recipes, fully as interesting.

The first prize, $3, was won by Mrs. Margaret H. Bringman, 3422 Garfield street northwest, for her recipe for frankfurters baked in barbecue sauce. The second prize, $2, went to Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick, Md., for her recipe for salmon supper loaf; the third prize, $1, went to Mrs. H. C. Beale, 2219 Thirty-ninth street northwest, for her recipe for chartreuse of veal and rice, and the fourth prize, also $1, went to Mrs. Caso March, 715 Crittenden street northwest, for her recipe for ham salad loaf. The fifth prize, $1, was awarded to Miss Marie-Anne Greenough for her recipe for liver loaf.

Here is Mrs. Bringman's recipe:

Frankfurters Baked in Barbecue Sauce.

1 tablespoon butter
½ onion, chopped
4 teaspoons sugar
½ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon mustard (dry)
1 teaspoon paprika
½ cup catsup
¼ cup vinegar
¾ cup of water
4 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
12 Frankfurters
½ pound hamburger

Melt butter and add chopped onion and cook until clear. Add dry seasoning, catsup, vinegar, water and sauces and bring to a boil.

Crisp hamburger in hot frying pan, and add to the sauce before pouring over the Frankfurters before baking.

With a sharp knife, cut a 3-inch slit in each Frankfurter.

Place Frankfurters in a flat baking pan (casserole may be used for picnic), slit side up. Pour sauce over all and bake in a moderate oven for 25 minutes. Baste Frankfurters with sauce once or twice.

Mrs. Rhoads' recipe:

Salmon Supper Loaf.

2 cups flaked salmon
½ cup seedless raisins
1 cup shredded raw carrot
½ cup sliced celery
¼ cup pickle relish
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
Drop of tabasco sauce
¾ tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup cottage cheese
½ cup mayonnaise
Small sandwich loaf bread
1 package cream cheese

Wash raisins in hot water; drain. Combine with salmon, carrot, celery, relish, lemon juice, and seasonings. Soften gelatin in cold water; melt over hot water. Add to cottage cheese which has been blended with mayonnaise. Mix thoroughly with first mixture. Remove crust from bread. Cut ¼ inch slice off top of loaf and cut out center, leaving walls about ¼ inch thick. Fill with mixture. Replace top, fastening it with toothpicks. Chill loaf thoroughly, ice with cream cheese which has been mixed with a little milk until soft enough to spread. Garnish with lettuce cups holding pickles, olives, and radish roses. Slice and serve with an assortment of relishes. Serves eight.

Mrs. Beale's recipe follows:

Chartreuse of Veal and Rice.

3 Cups chopped veal
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon onion juice
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ cup mushrooms, canned or sauted
1 egg
¾ cup fine, soft bread crumbs
3 cups cooked rice
1 cup veal stock

Add seasoning to veal; add mushrooms, mix with crumbs, beaten egg and stock. Line a well-buttered mold with 2 cups rice, cover and bake at 350 degrees F. for 1 hour. Keep in refrigerator until ready to serve. Slice and place on lettuce leaves, passing currant jelly and chili sauce.

Here is Mrs. March's recipe:

Ham Salad Loaf.

3 cups tomato juice
1 small onion, minced
½ teaspoon sugar
1 1-3 tablespoon unflavored gelatine
½ cup cold water
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1½ cups ground boiled ham
1 package cream cheese
Salad dressing

Add sugar and onion to one cup tomato juice and simmer 5 minutes. Strain and add gelatine soaked in water 5 minutes. Add cold tomato juice; divide into three parts. Mix ham, mustard and enough salad dressing to make a paste. Pour 1-3 of tomato juice mixture into loaf pan, and chill until firm. Spread with ham and pour on 1-3 tomato juice. Chill until firm, spread with cheese mixed with a little cream and salad dressing. Pour on last 1-3 of tomato juice and chill. Unmold and slice. Serve on lettuce.

Miss Grennough's recipe:

Liver Loaf.

Cut two pounds of liver into large pieces and rub them through a grater. Moisten ½ cup of breadcrumbs and ½ cup of flour with ½ cup of milk. Fry the slices of ½ an onion in a tablespoon of butter until they are tender. Then remove them and put into a pan the mixture of bread, flour and milk. Stir until it is cooked to a smooth paste. Put into a bowl 2 cupfuls of liver pulp, the bread-paste, 1 teaspoon of salt, 1 saltspoon of pepper and a dash of paprika. Mix well together, and add one at a time, 4 eggs, beating in each one well. Then add enough cream to make rather a thin batter. Pass the whole through a puree sieve. Beat it well again and pour into a quart mould, which has been lined with thin slices of larding pork. Fill mould to within a quarter of an inch of the top. Cover it with slices of pork, set in a pan of water, cover in a slow oven for an hour. Serve cold with quarters of tomatoes, and lettuce salad with French dressing.

Jackets a Necessity.

New York (AP).—Jackets are definitely a wardrobe necessity for summer. Gay striped blazer boleros provide color contrast with white costumes. Lace and eyelet jackets are worn over evening gowns. The latest jacket material is velveteen. It comes in rich shades which emphasize one color in a print costume.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Blood Pressure.

Whenever we publish an article on high blood pressure we almost invariably get a number of letters that want to know what to do about low blood pressure. For most people our age-long answer is perfectly satisfactory, which is "Get down on your knees and thank God for it."

Most people don't know they have low blood pressure until it is taken; they have no symptoms from it, but sometimes they become alarmed when they are told about its existence. As a matter of fact, its only significance is that they have the kind of a circulatory system which will allow them to live in comfort until an advanced age.

There are, however, certain exceptions, and there is one form of low blood pressure in which certain symptoms are experienced—symptoms which are undoubtedly associated with the low pressure. These symptoms are absence of sweating, extreme fatigue and loss of vitality, pallor, lowered metabolic rate, and failure of an increase in the pulse rate when the patient stands.

One such patient was a man 38 years old, who complained of spells of weakness, light-headedness, blurring vision and lack of pep. His work was of a type that required frequent changes in posture and a constant exposure to high temperatures. With changes of posture from sitting to standing, and so on, he would experience vertigo, nausea, and sometimes unconsciousness. When he was in a hot room he would not perspire at all, but, curiously enough, when he entered a cooler atmosphere he perspired as if the all the sweat ducts were turned on at once.

This tendency to have a low blood pressure on change of posture is duplicated in several other conditions, such as the presence of albumin in the urine while standing, but not while lying down.

For these postural low blood pressure cases, treatment by use of a drug named benzedrine sulfate has been advocated. It is successful in quite a large proportion of properly selected cases. It should be administered, however, only under the direction of a physician.

Questions from Readers. . . .

G. D.: "What is your opinion of the return-to-nature diet which advocates that man, like his primitive ancestors, should eat only one meal daily?"

Answer: In the first place, there is no evidence that primitive man ate only one meal a day, and in the second place, with his digestive equipment, modern man cannot get enough energy to keep himself going on one meal.

Outdoor Furniture for Lazy Hours

Porch and garden furniture for the summer scores another triumph in man's continued efforts to get the best of nature. Designed for comfort and good looks throughout the whole season, the new outdoor pieces are unaffected by weather exposure. Waterproof finishes protect the metal and wood frames and water-repellant fabrics provide upholstery that is unharmed by sudden showers. These new products and synthetic materials, for which chemical research is responsible, have vastly increased the enjoyment of living in the open. Some of the smartest of the season's new pieces are upholstered in fabrikoid, chosen because its lacquered surface resists water and insect damage as well as for its interesting patterns and variety of grains. For hours at ease in the garden a bamboo tent equipped with rattan furniture is a delightful hot weather haven. A wide couch, a deep chair and a little table—all finished in antique brown with colorful lacquered upholstery, look rustic yet sophisticated. Here the vivid color scheme follows the popular vogue for contrasts. The back cushions are made in three sausage-like rolls, with yellow at top and bottom and turquoise blue in the center, the seat cushions being solid blue. Piping along the edges carries out the same contrasting effect.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Discouraged in Search for Ideal Mate, Girl Thinks of Marrying Man She's Fond Of; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 24 and considered attractive. I am from the Middle West and was a debutante in 1934-1935. I like to go places and do things, but I've been doing just that for ten years, until two months ago, that is, when I came to Washington to work. All the young men I've ever been terribly attracted to haven't been worth the powder to blow them up, figuratively speaking. Somehow, I never seem to "fall" for one who would make a good husband.

• • • •

Here is my problem: There is a young man, a European, whom I have known for three years. He has been in love with me most of that time and I like him tremendously. After we had known each other about a year, he begged me to marry him and go to South America, where he was taking a position with a large international firm. I refused, because I hated to give up the idea of romance which I think ought to go with marriage.

• • • •

He went without me but wrote, cabled and sent gifts constantly. One year later he came back to America—for a vacation, I thought; but really to propose again, I found. Again I refused but told him I still enjoyed being with him—and I do. We have corresponded regularly since his return to South America, and now he is pressing me for my final answer

• • • •

Miss Haworth, I'm 24 and getting harder to please every day. I'm beginning to think there isn't any permanency in physical attraction and maybe I should put aside my ideas of story-book romance and start to live the life of a normal adult. In other words, marry this man. He is not unattractive. He is very well educated and we have the same tastes in people and activities. Besides that, he offers me travel and an interesting life. There is no racial or religious conflict.

DILEMMA.

Things to Consider.

DEAR DILEMMA: Since, fundamentally, you care so little for this man—and so well able to live without him—that you could twice see him off for South America without feeling an almost irresistible desire to go with or immediately follow after him. I think it would be a serious risk to marry him. The fact that he cares so much while you care so little is added reason for weighing his proposal very carefully before accepting it. If both of you were considering marriage for reasons of affection and compatibility of temperaments and interests, the relationship would have a better chance of slowly ripening into romantic love after marriage.

• • • •

This man may think now that he would be content to have you as his wife on terms of affection only, but if he loves you with all the feeling that the term implies to the aware mind, he would discover differently after marriage. Unless you speedily learned to reciprocate his love, or acted the part (and acting an emotional role is nerve-exhausting to the nth degree) certain resentments, reserves and estrangements would almost inevitably develop.

• • • •

Another point to consider is this: Up to now you have been looking for and waiting for the "great love of your life," so to speak. You are not at all sure the European is the man. Supposing you married him, you might do so with certain mental and emotional reservations. Consciously or unconsciously, even though his wife, you might go on looking for the "great love;" entertaining romantic speculations about every personable man you met. Are you willing to surrender all hope of story book romance in marrying your European; or rather to dedicate yourself to finding it with him, and him alone?

• • • •

At 24, you are too young to marry only in order to commit yourself to adult living. You have at least six years yet which you can afford to devote to looking around for a mate who appears to be all your heart desires. If you were in the thirties, you could better afford to commit yourself to a socially expedient marriage which promised companionship in place of romantic young love. For, it is to be presumed, you would have more worldly and emotional knowledge and would be a disciplined woman prepared to adjust yourself to whatever eventualities your mature decision invited.

M. H.

Tragic "Triangle" Affair.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What can be done about a married man who meets a girl through a member of his family, pays her the greatest attention, spends every possible minute in her company even to the point of neglecting his work, is apparently deeply in love with her, says he has never found happiness with his wife, makes love to her from the first meeting until finally she yields to his persuasions, which seems only to deepen his love to the point where she receives a letter so full of protestations of love that it breaks her engagement to another man? (He, you see, found the letter and realized what had happened). Of course, after the married man was found out he would have nothing more to do with the young girl.

• • • •

The wife, I understand, is a really fine person and heartbroken over the affair, so that three lives are shattered by the contemptible conduct of this man who seems incapable of deep feeling. Can nothing be done about such contemptible persons whose only desire is to gratify the appetite of the flesh? Of course, the girl is to blame in a measure, as everyone knows right from wrong, but she was swept off her feet. Her former fiance and the man's wife, I presume, can never again have the same faith in human nature. Such a man, of course, is not worth worrying about, but that does not ease the hurt. Can you write anything that will help? Or that will keep others from the same great mistake?

A. L. B.

Warning to Reckless.

DEAR A. L. B.: Your letter in itself constitutes as powerful a warning as I could fashion in regard to the unwisdom, from all fair-minded persons' point of view, of extra-marital, triangular love affairs. Of late several correspondents have taken their pens in hand to indorse hit-or-miss sexual experimentation as the best method of finding the ideal mate, but for every enduring union thus deviously arrived at, unquestionably there have been uncounted other instances where similar experimentation resulted in broken hearts, blasted hopes, shattered ideals and wrecked lives.

• • • •

As for what to do with, or about unscrupulous and brutally selfish men who gratify animal desires at the expense of others' destinies—that is a question which has perplexed just minds from the beginning of recorded history, and, so far as I know, no suitable or universally enforceable chastisement has yet been devised.

Style Possible On Slim Purse, Insists Author

Marjorie Hillis Gives Rules for Inexpensive Smartness.

CAN A WOMAN look like a fashion plate on a slim purse?

This long-debated question now has a new ally on the affirmative side—Marjorie Hillis, young author, who recently in "Live Alone and Like It," showed women how to be happy without husbands.

In her new book, "Orchids on Your Budget," Miss Hillis maintains stoutly that neither a lot of money nor a lot of time are essential to feminine chic. It's largely a matter of brains and education, she insists.

Studying authoritative fashion pages and magazines is Miss Hillis' first advice to the woman who would achieve style. "If you must bargain hunt," she advises, "do it late in the season at a good shop, not early in the season at a cheap one."

In giving concrete rules for smart and economical dressing, Miss Hillis starts out with what she calls "the old saw about building your wardrobe around one color." She adds: "It's got to be a dark, practical, unoriginal color. To be explicit, it's got to be black, blue or brown. Not for you are the 'dee-vine' new peanut-butter-tans or the passionate pansy-purples or the whoopla-reds. Not in your suits and dresses, at any rate.

"Those little whimsies are for the girls with rich husbands, or something, and we hope they like them. What's more, you'd better get your hats and shoes, your bags (or some of them if you have several) and most of your dresses in the same unexciting shade.

Miss Hillis' second rule is "never to buy clothes that are too definitely one-purpose clothes or even one-season clothes. "Every garment in a small wardrobe should be able to go a lot of places," she says. For evening she warns against velvet and organdie frocks "or any others that you can't wear the year around in a pinch."

"A really limited wardrobe," she adds, "shouldn't have more than one formal evening dress anyway, and that should have a jacket that can be worn or left at home."

An "excellent economy" in clothes buying, she adds, "is to keep thin." For those overweight who still must buy bargains she recommends

Another suggestion by Miss Hillis is "do not attempt to have everything come within the same price range. Buy a coat or suit or street dress at a more expensive shop than your budget would allow if you averaged things up and then make up for it in the clothes you wear around the house and in your evening wardrobe."

In her rules for shopping she warns against "too casual buying of cheap clothes. And never get a dress that is a bit skimpy," she adds, getting their models in large sizes and having them fitted.

Some of Miss Hillis' other clothes maxims are:

Don't buy clothes to wear to the places you'd like to go; buy them to wear to the places you go.

Don't keep on wearing what was becoming ten years ago; fashions have changed, and so have your skin, hair and figure.

Three black dresses in a row in your closet won't bore you one quarter as much as three in any other color.

Don't try to be a "type" on a limited income.

Beware of the surplice dress, especially after 40.

A cheap dress worn with good accessories will fool more people than an expensive dress worn with cheap accessories.

A suit is the backbone of many a smart wardrobe, but not the most down-to-earth wardrobes. You have to wear a coat anyway, and while both suit and coat are nice it's not actually necessary to have both.

Any wardrobe that hasn't at least one dress that makes you feel as pretty and as elegant as you can possibly feel is a wash-out.

Gala Events Arranged for VanZeelands

Belgian Prime Minister to Reach Capital This Morning.

President Will Receive Diplomat and Wife at White House

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Few foreign dignitaries have had more fanfare on visiting these shores than already has been accorded the 43-year-old Prime Minister of Belgium, Dr. Paul van Zeeland, who with Mme. van Zeeland, will arrive in Washington this morning.

The constant round of entertainments into which he was plunged when he landed in New York a few days ago will be continued during the three days he and Mme. van Zeeland spend in the Capital. A neat program, now complete in every detail, has been worked out for the distinguished visitors who will reach Washington at 11:15.

They will be received at Union Station by Acting Secretary of State, Mr. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mr. Marvin McIntyre, the Commandant of the Navy Yard, Rear Admiral George Pettingill; the Chief of the Division of European Affairs, Mr. James Clement Dunn, and the Chief of Protocol, Mr. Richard Southgate.

Secretary of State Away From Capital for Day.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Cordell Hull, will not be on hand to greet the visitors. He left Washington last evening for New Haven, Conn., and will receive an honorary degree at Yale University today. He will return to Washington this evening.

The Prime Minister and Mme. Van Zeeland will go from the Union Station directly to the White House, where they will be received by the President and also by Mrs. Roosevelt if she returns from New York in time. Her schedule these days is just about as crowded as the Prime Minister's. Last evening she was guest of honor at the American Library Association's Newberry Medal dinner in New York. Anyway, if she is back before the Van Zeelands arrive at the White House, she probably will accompany them.

The Prime Minister and Mme. Van Zeeland will have lunch on the Presidential yacht. Potomas, and will accompany the President on a trip down the Potomac River, stopping at Mount Vernon for a visit. This evening the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at dinner in honor of the visitors, who will remain at the White House overnight.

Tomorrow morning the Prime Minister will call upon the Secretary of State at the Department of State, and will go from there to the Belgian Embassy. Later, he and Mme. Van Zeeland will be guests of honor at a luncheon given at the Carlton Hotel by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull.

Crowded Schedule Will Continue Through Friday.

Tomorrow afternoon the Prime Minister will go to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where he will lay a wreath, and tomorrow evening he and Mme. Van Zeeland will be guest of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn.

Friday's program will include a luncheon at the National Press Club, given by the National Press Association in honor of the Prime Minister, and a dinner and reception at the Belgian Embassy.

Heralded as one of the foremost figures in modern Europe, the youthful prime minister has occupied a prominent position in internatoinal affairs since the day he gave up his dual position as director of the Institute of Political Economy at the University of Louvain and the vice governorship of the National Bank of Belgium to take over the reins of state in a country that has long been the "buffer nation" of Europe.

French Ambassador Also Well in Spotlight.

But important as the visit of the Belgian premier seems to be, it will not occupy all the attention the next few days. The outcome of the French Ambassador's return to his homeland also will be followed with interest.

Faced with the stupendous task of putting into good shape the finances of a country that may change its cabinet again before he lands on the other side, the Ambassador already has left Washington and will sail for Paris today. As soon as it was noised about that he was going back home for a few weeks, the telephone at the French Embassy began buzzing. Countless inquirers wanted to know when the Ambassador was leaving. When would he return? Were Mme. Bonnet and their adopted boy, Alain, going with him?

Mme. Bonnet apparently was very much upset over the sudden summons of the Ambassador. "It came as such as surprise," she said at the embassy yesterday. "I shall remain at the embassy for my husband has not given up his post. In about a month I may join him for a vacation or to stay.

It was learned from a reliable source that the Ambassador, who has long been associated with the government of France and held the post of minister of finance, was not so surprised at the change in the cabinet and expected to make a trip to France in order to offer his guidance at the crucial time. The exact hour that he would be called was, of course, unknown.

Mrs. P. D. Bunker Visits Daughter

Wife of Colonel Enjoys Unfolding Stories of Travels.

A visitor who has a fund of fascinating stories of far-away places to relate is Mrs. Paul D. Bunker, who is now the guest of Mrs. Thompson Brooke Maury 3d, wife of Lieut. Maury, of Fort Myer.

The wife of Col. Bunker, Mrs. Bunker has spent the past three years in the Philippines and has traveled extensively in China. While all the world seems to be going to China these days, the Bunkers had some experiences there of which the average traveler cannot boast.

On one occasion they found themselves involved in a memorial service for a bandit chief and were called upon to pay deep tribute to the deceased hero. Being discreet and desirous of getting out of the difficulty as painlessly as possible, both Col. and Mrs. Bunker made the proper obeisances at the directed times—much to their own disgust and discomfort, since the bows had to be low and prolonged.

Mrs. Bunker is the former Miss Leila Landon Beehler, the daughter of Capt. William Beehler, U. S. N. She once attended Gunston Hall. Later, after her marriage, she lived at Tilden Hall. Her daughter, the former Miss Priscilla Bunker—now Mrs. Maury—attended George Washington University. Mrs. Bunker has many friends in Army, Navy and residential circles in Washington, Annapolis, Baltimore and Richmond.

She has two sons in the Army—Lieut. Paul D. Bunker, jr., of the Air Corps, now stationed in Honolulu, and Lieut. William Beehler Bunker, now at the Army Base in Boston.

Elizabeth Vandenberg Is Visiting Her Parents At Apartment Here

Miss Elizabeth Vandenberg, concert pianist, who has been in New York the past two winters studying with Lee Pattison, arrived in Washington yesterday to spend a few days with her father and mother, Senator and Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, at their apartment at the Wardman Park.

Although her plans for the summer are not completed, Miss Vandenberg expects to go to Michigan later to spend some time. Mrs. Vandenberg probably will join her there in about two weeks. Each summer the Vandenberg family visits Mr. George Getz, in his cottage on Lake Michigan.

While Miss Vandenberg's name and fame as a concert pianist got off to an excellent start last December when she made her debut with the Grand Rapids Symphony Orchestra, she is not the only member of the family who has won acclaim as a "wizard of the keys." Her Brother, Arthur, jr., is also a talented pianist.

Republican Women To Occupy New Home

League to Move Into McCagg House on July 20; Extensive Repairs Made; Portrait of Gen. Grant Is Donated.

THE LEAGUE OF REPUBLICAN WOMEN has a new home—the old McCagg house at 1301 Seventeenth street, and will move in July 20. The new headquarters has been leased for three years, and the league has nothing to worry about so far as maintenance is concerned. Within two weeks after the plan of securing the house was presented by the new president, Mme. Cantacuzene, money was in the bank to cover the cost of repairs and to pay the rent for two years.

Despite the events of last November, there are vigorous signs of life in the Republican League. In addition to having raised enough to launch the project of establishing new headquarters, the members also have boosted the balance in the treasury from $400 to $1,500 since April, when the new officers were installed.

The house, which has a gracious tradition of hospitality, has been used as a boarding house in recent years and required extensive repairs to put it in shape for its new tenants. The lower floor will serve as a lounge where members will gather for teas and receptions. On the second floor, the board room will be over the drawing room and the offices in the rear. There also will be an office for the Young Republicans, and Mrs. Cooper Rhodes, head of the woman's section, has been named as a member of the house committee.

Portrait of Grant For Board Room.

Mme. Cantacuzene will furnish the board room, on the walls of which will hang a portrait of her grandfather, President Grant, which is oddly associated with her taking the leadership of the league. She received a letter some months ago from an old member of the Unconditional Republican Club, of Albany, N. Y., established at the time of her grandfather's campaign. He said the club, now dissolved, had a picture of President Grant, painted at that time, and asked if she would like to buy it. She did so, and on the day of her election as president of the league it arrived in Washington.

She hopes later to be able to secure a portrait of Abraham Lincoln, founder of the party, to hang in the drawing room. Other furnishings in the house will be from the women's headquarters formerly maintained in the National Capital Club.

The league plans to have the clubhouse open every afternoon for tea from 4 to 6 o'clock to welcome members and their friends who are visiting in Washington, and Democratic friends as well, whose hospitality at their headquarters the members of the league will have opportunity to return. A day at home also will be arranged every so often, and other social affairs given.

League Co-operates In National Work.

The national headquarters, in New York City, welcomes the cooperation of the league here in sending out literature and giving other assistance to the party for which its location in the National Capital particularly fits it. In the District, with no vote to get out and no precinct work to be done, is in a position to give more time to such activity, Mme. Cantacuzene pointed out, than organizations elsewhere.

Business meetings will be held as usual the first Monday in every month with outstanding speakers, and educational material will be distributed. Mrs. James Wentz heads the program committee, with Mrs. Ralph Church vice chairman and Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker the third member.

A look at the personnel of the committees serving under Mme. Cantacuzene suggests history repeating itself. Miss Mary Sheridan, of the house committee, is the eldest daughter of Gen. Phil Sheridan, who served under Gen. Grant and was one of the great figures in the Union Army during the Civil War. Mrs. Tucker is the daughter of another Civil War hero and political leader, Gen. John A. Logan, who was known as "the Black Eagle of the West," and later was Senator from Illinois and ran for Vice President in Blaine's campaign.

On Miss Sheridan's committee is Maurice Thatcher, wife of the former Governor of the Canal Zone.

Mrs. Wallace H. White heads the entertainment committee, Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy the hostess committee and Mrs. Warren Austin the membership committee, of which Mrs. Corcoran Thom is vice chairman. Mrs. Clarence Hancock is chairman of the finance committee and Mrs. E. E. Gann heads the advisory committee, with Mrs. Alvin T. Hert as honorary chairman.

Among other prominent women active in the league are Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, vice president; Mrs. Virginia White Speel, national committeewoman and parliamentarian; Mrs. William Morton Grinnell, who has charge of the printing, and who is a daughter of Gen. Ernst, who served with Mme. Cantacuzene's father; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, a member of the advisory committee; Mrs. Russell Harrison, a daughter-in-law of President Harrison, also a member of the advisory committee; Mrs. Frank Mondell and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, vice presidents; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon and Mrs. Bertrand H. Snell, members of the board of directors, and Mrs. Charles Lea, who organized one of the counties in Pennsylvania which went Republican in the November election.

MARGUERITE MERIGOLD, president of the D. C. branch of the League of American Pen Women, has taken pains to see that no members of the league get lost on their way out to the founders' day party Saturday at the home of Col. and Mrs. Richard Ratcliffe Farr.

With the invitations Miss Merigold has inclosed not one map, but two, giving the members a choice of routes, both so carefully marked as to leave no excuse for a late arrival.

Route A is by way of Key Bridge and Cherrydale, 14 miles, but with more traffic than Route B, by way of the Memorial Bridge and Columbia pike, the little maps explain. They take the guest not only to the Farr house, but around the house to the place for parking their cars. An additional aid will be a poster with the league insignia, by Rebecca Sahm, tacked to a tree at the entrance of the Farrs' lane.

Guests of honor will be the surviving founders of the club, Virginia King Frye, Emma Triepel and Anna Patten, together with past presidents of both the national league and district branch.

Mrs. Lucia Hanna Hadley, a former first vice president of the D. C. branch, who has just returned from Florida, where she spent the winter, will be among the guests. She is at present at the home of Mary Hornaday, retiring president of the Women's National Press Club.

ANOTHER LEAGUE member, Dr. Jean Stephenson, former president, and active also in the D. A. R. and the Genealogical Society, leaves this week for Gatlinburg, Tenn., to attend the conference of the Appalachian Trail Club. After the meeting she will take a camping trip through the Great Smokies, to be gone two weeks.

Miss Stephenson, in addition to her regular work, writes and lectures on historical and genealogical subjects. She has written articles on the Appalachian Trail and on the Historical Record Survey, is supervising compilation of a bibliography of American history and genealogy and has recently gathered a great amount of unpublished source material for the D. A. R. collection.

About 30 attended, among them Mme. Cantacuzene, Miss Sara Snell, Mrs. Cooper Rhodes and Mrs. Hart, of the Young Republicans, served refreshments.

Mrs. Fletcher Hale, widow of former Representative Hale, of New Hampshire, will be in charge of the office.

Pius' Reception Of Rebel Envoy Stirs Diplomats

Pope's Gesture Regarded as Recognition of Spanish Insurgent Rule.

By the Associated Press.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, June 22.—Pope Pius created a stir in the Diplomatic Corps accredited to the Holy See today by receiving formally for the first time Admiral Antonio de Magaz, diplomatic representative of the Spanish insurgent regime.

Some quarters interpreted the formal audience as evidence of virtual recognition of the insurgent regime by the Vatican.

The Spanish diplomat informed the Pope of the new situation in Spain following the insurgent occupation of Bilbao, Basque capital, which Vatican circles believed was another step toward the time when the Vatican can recognize formally Generalissimo Francisco Franco's regime.

Prelates at the same time said they noticed with regret Italian newspapers printed toned-down versions of "anti-church speeches" in Germany by such men as Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels and Adolf Wagner, Bavarian minister of interior.

They interpreted the handling of the speeches as reflecting Premier Benito Mussolini's desire to mediate between the Vatican and Germany in their church conflict and to prevent the Italian people, who are more than 90 per cent Catholic, from learning the true state of tension.

Franco Warns Santander.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 22 (AP).—Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco today warned Santander to surrender or suffer a siege similar to that which ended in the fall of Bilbao.

Franco's airplanes scattered leaflets containing the warning over Santander, Basque city about 45 miles west of Bilbao on the north Spanish coast. It is the last important city held by the Basque administration.

"Defense of Santander would be only vain and bloody," the manifesto declared.

Insurgents reported Franco's columns were pushing northwestward from Bilbao and occupying the territory between the captured Basque capital and Santander.

British Ship Stopped.

St. Jean de Luz, France, June 22 (AP).—The British steamer Mariana Moler was stopped at sea today by a Spanish insurgent armed trawler, which accused the captain of carrying Spanish government troops.

The Mariana Moler was allowed to proceed after intervention by the British battleship Resolution. The steamer was carrying 1,700 Spanish refugees from Santander to France.

Ten cabinet portfolios were allotted to Socialists, while most of the balance was held by Radical Socialists. No post was given to the Communists, who supported but refused to participate in the first People's Front government.

Although Socialist support was given the group, the Socialist Party's self-styled "Revolutionary Left" wing, whose leader is Marceau Pivert, raised loud protests in the street outside the Socialist council meeting.

"Blum to power!" and "Chautemps, resign!" were the shouts of the left wing adherents.

The People's Front called its supporters to a "huge" demonstration Thursday in the Place de la Nation, the heart of the Paris working quarter, to "proclaim they won't accept any program, majority or government" other than that of the People's Front.

The new premier announced his cabinet would make its first appearance in the Chamber of Deputies June 29, thus giving Bonnet a week to reach Paris.

Fugitive for 17 Years Wins Murder Acquittal

Monticello, N. Y., June 22 (AP).—A Sullivan County Court jury tonight acquitted Douglas Banks, 50, of the 17-year-old murder of Morris Nasofer, Parksville Hotel proprietor. Banks insisted he shot Nasofer in self-defense.

Hunted since 1920, he surrendered in San Francisco three months ago. He testified that several years ago he tried to surrender at a police station in New York City, but the desk sergeant told him to "go out and buy another drink."

'I Was Lost,' Says Schoolgirl Describing Religious Betrayal

Delight Jewett, 17, Tells California Court How Disciple of Father Divine Assaulted Her; 'Didn't Understand,' She Explains.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, June 22.—Delight Jewett, 17, Denver High School girl, testified in Federal court today that John West Hunt, 33, wealthy disciple of Father Divine, betrayed her at his Beverly Hills home last Christmas Eve.

She said he and three other followers of the New York colored cult leader who are on trial on Man act charges brought her to Beverly Hills by automobile from Denver after drafting her into the role of a new "Virgin Mary."

Miss JJewett testified she first met Hunt and the others last December 16 at a Father Divine mission meeting to which her parents took her in Denver.

The other defendants are H. B. Smith, 66, retired engineer, and two Los Angeles housewives, Mrs. Elizabeth Peters and Mrs. Agnes Gardner.

Miss Jewett said the second night she was at Hunt's home Smith told her she was to occupy Hunt's bedroom suite thenceforth.

"I didn't say anything," she testified. "That night I found Mr. Hunt sleeping in the bed I had occupied the night before. I undressed in the dark and sat in a chair.

"He called to me and said 'come on to bed.'

"I said I was very comfortable where I was. I finally got into the other twin bed and Mr. Hunt talked for two hours about Father Divine.

"Finally, Mr. Hunt came to my bed."

She said he then betrayed her.

"Then," she testified, "he sent a telegram to Father Divine, reading 'Whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder,' He signed his name and mine."

The girl said Hunt brought Mrs. Peters into the room the next day, Christmas Day, while she, Miss Jewett, was still in bed, and the group engaged in general conversation.

She said Hunt became intimate with her again and then they got up and had breakfast, after which she went to Mrs. Peters' room.

"I was lost," she said. "I didn't understand all those things. Mrs. Peters said the spirit did not move her to explain them."

Bank Loot Traced At Murder Trial

Topeka, Kans., June 22 (AP).—Government witnesses traced a trail of bank loot from New York to Nebraska today in an effort to pin the slaying of Federal Agent Wimberly W. Baker on Robert Suhay and Glen Applegate, New York gunmen on trial for murder in Federal court here.

Edward W. Fielder, president of the Northern Westchester Bank at Katonah, N. Y., identified Suhay and Applegate as two of three men who robbed the bank of $18,402 last March 12. The two gunmen are accused of killing Wimberly as they shot their way out of a G-man trap in the Topeka Postoffice last April 16.

Edward J. Larkin, John F. Gannon and Harold R. Cadmus, money-shipping clerks of the Federal Reserve Bank in New York City, were placed on the stand to identify money taken from the bank during the robbery. The Government seeks to prove the money was found on Applegate and Suhay when they were captured in Plattsmouth, Nebr., a few hours after Baker was shot down.

Milwaukee, June 22 (AP).—David Lasser, of Washington, president of the Workers Alliance of America, today told delegates from 45 States attending the organization's third annual convention that industrialists were throwing aside democracy for open warfare on the working class.

Lasser, in his annual report, said: "Unable to win their workers by flattery, the industrial tyrants now try to win them with tear gas and buckshot."

torials after failure of the four-power conference in London to agree on a course of action in the Leipzig case.

Some observers regarded the editorial as virtual announcement that Germany is again quitting the Non-intervention Committee.

"One certainly must not expect in London that Germany, nevertheless, will continue to experiment" after collapse of the conference, der fuehrer's mouthpiece asserted flatly.

German sailors are too good to play the role of guinea pigs amid the ignorance of English diplomats as to the real nature of bolshevism."

Authoritative sources said earlier that Germany is free to take action independent of other powers. Officials, however, warned against jumping at quick conclusions on possible action against the Spanish Valencia government for alleged attempts to torpedo the cruiser Leipzig.

"The course of the London discussions," Hitler's paper said, "can be regarded by Bolshevists as direct encouragement to new acts of violence.

"The London Communique says Germany demanded a united four-power naval demonstration off the Valencia coast. But Germany also submitted for debate a measure providing for internment of Red submarines (Spanish government craft.) Both proposals were rejected by England."

Other papers attacked England with almost equal violence.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung observed that "it can already be said without hesitation that the Worsening situation was precipitated by the English. But neither can France be acquitted of blame."

As to definite action, officials said: "A decision has not yet been made." (Gibraltar reported that four German warships the Koln, Tiger, Luchs and Leopard reached Algeciras, Spain, today, and that the cruiser Leipzig and other German warships had been seen at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco under insurgent control, during the day.)

Hitler was said to have had several conferences today with army, navy and air force commanders. He also was reported as conferring with Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, foreign minister, whose scheduled visit to London was cancelled yesterday.

Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff declared "events which caused Germany to ask consultation of the four naval powers do not permit delay."

Accord Jeopardized.

Rome, June 22 (AP).—The entire system for nonintervention in the Spanish civil war was jeopardized by the refusal of France and Britain to sanction a naval demonstration against the Spanish government, informed sources said tonight.

LOUIS KAYOS BRADDOCK IN 8th ROUND, WINS WORLD TITLE weight championship was nothing short of marvelous.

Not much can be said for his inability to cope with Braddock's fire and determination before the snap was drained through the fading legs. Neither can much praise be bestowed upon Louis for the manner in which he missed punches wildly as he sought to drop a tiring man who had outlived his usefulness in that particular fight.

Braddock lunged out of his corner at the first bell, throwing a right which missed Louis' petrified face by inches. Jim then elected to back away, jabbing with a snaky left and boxing beautifully as his keen eyes sought chinks in the Brown Bomber's armor.

Louis Is Floored.

Louis caught the champion with a right to the head, which was the signal for one of the Joe Louis special barrages of bangs with both hands. Braddock wobbled uncertainly, pulled Joe into a clinch and rammed home a short right uppercut to the chin which dropped Louis squarely on his posterior quarters. Louis was up at the count of one, but his face wore the same bewildered expression that decorated it after Max Schmeling had flooring him for the first time.

Joe wobbled uncertainly as he retreated to a neutral corner, but Braddock would not risk staking his all on one determined punch, and they resumed cautious sparring. Braddock rushed Louis to the ropes early in the second round and pummeled him mercilessly in the body. A stiff left hook to the midrift bent Louis almost double and a right to the head sent Louis reeling. Joe seemed a badly frightened boy until he landed a terrific right to the head, then another, which had Jimmy reeling at the bell.

The third round was action-packed as Louis answered the bell with both hands spitting knockouts which failed to find their target as Braddock boxed cautiously out of danger. There ensued a prolonged session of pecking and jabbing, with Louis gaining a slight edge, but Braddock evened matters with a hard right high on the head. That blow, an almost exact counterpart of the wallop with which Schmeling battered Louis into submission, left Joe slightly groggy at the bell, but once again Jim elected to wait for another pot shot rather than risking the fight on one desperate finishing punch.

Fourth Round Tame.

The fourth, another close round, was rather tame as Braddock contented himself with flicking lefts to Joe's face interspersed with an occasional solid left hook to the stomach. Jim missed several hard rights aimed at the head, but landed a few more which started Joe's face puffing out of shape.

The fifth was Braddock's best round as he assumed command from the start with two hard rights to the head that started blood spurting from the new champion's nose. Braddock stalked Louis as relentlessly as the Bomber ever had pursued any stricken foe, battering his worried features into an unsightly mess. Braddock not only kept banging away at Louis' nose with a right, but added insult to injury by shoving an annoying left hand into the gory proboscis. As the round ended, ringside spectators were predicting a knockout victory for Braddock and the 1-to-3 ringtime odds on the challenger took an alarming drop.

Weakens in Sixth.

Braddock's downfall began midway of the sixth round. Coming out, Louis ran frantically, his face wearing an expression of pained surprise, or perhaps terror. One could almost see the vision of his knockout at the hands of Schmeling clouding his sight and creating a fearsome Braddock that did not exist. Jim finally cornered his retreating foe and sent him into the ropes with a smashing right to the head. Joe missed a vicious right, then landed a hard left hook to the head which apparently failed to bother the rugged champion.

Instead of falling or running before the Louis big gun, Jim waded into his adversary and the surprised Louis received two for one in a session of brutal brawling in the raw. In that exchange Braddock received the cut over his left eye which added to his troubles from then on. A terrific left hook to the head shook the defender to the heels and all but out on his feet he stood toe to toe, receiving a bad beating. Just at the bell Jim landed a hard left hook to the head which climaxed one of the most furious rounds in ring history.

From then on the doom of Braddock was sealed. He came out for the seventh swinging his right with determination, but with neither snap nor accuracy, as Louis ran before the attack. The champion landed a hard right to the head, then missed an even harder one. As he spun around from the momentum of the missed swing, Louis almost sent him down with a left hook. Jim battled back, but he was fighting a lost cause, impelled only by a leonine heart.

Eye Bleeds Again.

The champion's eye started to bleed again and gore poured from the cut on his mouth. At close quarters, Joe sent the Irishman's head bobbing with short lefts and rights. So wildly was Braddock flinging his right in sheer desperation that Louis began ducking it with ease—and Braddock's last chance had gone. Louis did plunge headlong into one hoopla wallop which made his knees sag and might have changed the tide of battle had not the snap and vigor been gone from Jimmy's gloved fists.

Braddock sunk dejectedly into his seat after dragging himself back to his corner. His legs, the most important asset of a fighter, were going back on him—had gone back on him. He pulled himself from his chair as the bell clanged, sending him to his doom—the doom of every fighter who goes to the wars too often.

Tired, dejected and a beaten man, Braddock still had a heart—a heart that sent him lunging toward his enemy. He fell into a welcome clinch, was pried loose and started to spar cautiously. A flurry, and Jim began to flounder. Louis backed off and ripped off that cruel right hand which was the last blow tossed in the fight.

Braddock dropped like lead on the canvas. Blood seeped from his eye and mouth as Referee Thomas counted him out. Louis remained as undisturbed as he always has in victory, even though this particular victory made him the heavyweight champion of the world, the youngest fighter ever to win that honor, and increased his ring earnings to a million dollars.

"Troubles Over," Says Joe.

"Mah troubles are ovah!" exulted Louis after the brawl was over. "Mah only regret is that ah didn't have Schmeling in there tonight."

Louis had nothing but the highest praise for Braddock's courage, his stamina—and his punch.

"Ah doan' see how he stood up undah the beatin' ah gave him as long as he did," he said. Louis also admitted Braddock had hurt him very badly as early as the first round.

"He hit me hahduh a lot of times than Max Baer did," the new champion admitted.

"When did Baer ever hit you?" asked a reporter.

"Aftuh the bell," chuckled the Detroit Dynamiter.

Braddock was even less vociferous than the tacturn one to whom he dropped his crown.

Seeks Return Bout.

"Joe is a good fighter," he conceded, "but I think I can beat him in a return bout with two fights under my belt. The lights hurt my eyes and I was tired after the fifth round."

Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, announced for the dethroned titleholder that Jim was not through, that he would continue his ring career and seek to regain his lost laurels.

The disappointing small crowd, which was 51,000 by official count, poured a gross of $570,000 into the tills of Co-promoters Mike Jacobs and Joe Foley. Braddock will receive 50 per cent of the net receipts of $456,000. Louis was paid 17½ per cent of the net.

Ma Is Happy!

New Champ's Mother Unexcited Over Son's Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, June 22.—Mrs. Lilly Barrow Brooks, mother of the new world heavyweight champion, Joe Lewis, took her son's victory tonight as calmly as the Brown Bomber himself takes his fighting.

She sat beside the radio in the living room of the house Louis bought her with the money he has earned in three years of professional fighting. With her was one daughter and a dozen friends.

"There it is!" Mrs. Brooks remarked when her son floored Jim Braddock for the count in the eighth round. "Joe's right hand was all right this time."

Her only other comment was that "Braddock put up a good fight."

Preliminaries

One of Champion Jim Braddock's sparring mates, Henry Cooper, of Brooklyn, 186½, scored the first preliminary victory tonight on the card preceding the world heavyweight championship fight. Cooper rallied at the close of a four-rounder to take the decision over Alex Kettles, of Chicago, 198.

Jack McCarthy, of Boston, 190, another of Braddock's sparring partners, came through with the judges' verdict in the second four-rounder. He outpunched Bernie Bowman, Chicago, who carried little but his 225 pounds of heft into action.

Max Roesch, youthful Dallas (Tex.) heavyweight, scaling 192, gained a close decision over Steve Carr, of Meriden, Conn., 182½, in four rounds. This made it three straight for the Braddock camp.

Max Zona, 192, fighting under the colors of the Catholic Youth Organization of Chicago, battered Bill Irby, of Eufala, Ala., 180¼, in an added four-rounder.

Nathan Mann, of New Haven, Conn., 187¼, pounded out a bloody decision over Charlie Massera, of Pittsburgh, 184¾, in six rounds. Mann's left hook opened a gash under Massera's right eye in the first round and the latter stayed the distance under severe handicaps.

In a rough-and-tumble 6-round bout, Arturo Godoy, of Argentina, outslugged Tony Galento, of Newark, N. J., to take the decision.

Jimmy Won't Retire; Wants Another Shot

Braddock Is Confident of Reversing Decision if They Meet Again.

By Eddie Brietz.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Chicago, June 22.—A badly whipped, dead tired, but game to the core Irishman lay prone on a dressing table under the stands at Comiskey Park tonight and refused to be counted out of the heavyweight picture.

James J. Braddock, just a few minutes removed from the worst licking of his long ring career, promised that if given another shot at Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber with the heavy siege guns, he'd reverse tonight's drama, when Louis crowdned himself heavyweight

Joe Louis Is the New Champion of the World, But That's Where the Trouble Starts—Pegler

By Westbrook Pegler.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, June 22.—With a soggy right smash to the chin, Joe Louis, the sulphur-colored Negro boy from Detroit, knocked out Jimmy Braddock in the eighth round of their fight at Comiskey's ball-yard on the Southside of Chicago tonight. This made Louis heavyweight champion of the world with the small but very confusing exception of Max Schemling the official state gladiator of Nazi Germany.

Mr. Schmeling knocked out Louis in 12 rounds a year ago and public opinion may either regard him as champion or create for him some special title to acknowledge his superior rank. The situation is not exactly new in the prize fight business as there have been many champions in various classes who had previously been beaten by other fighters whom they preferred to ignore after winning their titles.

The difference in the present case is that Schmeling has been taken up officially by Adolf Hitler and Little Joe Goebbels, the state minister of propaganda, who suddenly appreciated his character only after he had beaten Louis in New York. Up to that time they had ignored him and, so far as official recognition was concerned, had distinctly disowned him for he had previously been knocked out by Max Baer.

The defeat was bad enough for a patriot aspiring to wear the insignia of the spinning pinwheel on his bath robe and to dunk pretzels with Herr Hitler at official beer nights in Berlin, but the Jewishness of Mr. Baer was a tremendous humiliation to the Reich. Then, too, when Schmeling came over to fight Louis the American sport journalists and Herr Hitler himself, thought he would be soundly beaten for he had shown nothing to indicate otherwise.

Herr Hitler and Little Joe Goebbels wanted no part of a man who had been knocked out by a Jewisn person and who seemed pretty sure to be flattened by a colored party so they withheld recognition of Schmeling until the returns were in. Promptly thereafter they discovered that he was a pure Aryan, although Herr Schmeling, pointing to his high cheek bones, narrow eyes and coarse dark hair, once told your correspondent that he thought he might have an ancient Mongol strain in his makeup.

Hitler and Little Joe also learned that Schmeling was a fine example for the Nazi youth and he was taken up in a formal way by the politicians of Berlin. Now the Nazi Government may even resort to diplomatic usage to compel the American public and press to acknowledge Schmeling as champion, for the Reich is the first state in the world so hard put for honors as to regard the title as a valuable national asset.

Though the championship has been almost monopolized by American prizefighters from the time of the first recognized champion, John L. Sullivan, Washington always has regarded the champions as private operators and the title itself as a private and not too distinguished honor.

Who Is Champ.

However, if Schmeling's victory over Louis is to be insisted upon, a similar though somewhat less pressing argument could be made against his claim on the ground that he never did revoke the knockout he suffered at the hands of Mr. Baer. It goes into involvements, and deep thought and calm counsel will be requird to avert international complications.

Unfortunately the State Department has no acknowledged experts on the matter of prizefight succession, tradition and law but no doubt many well-informed authorities can be recruited from Cauliflower Alley who would be glad to serve for the stipend of an undersecretary plus the regulation equipment of striped pants and sugar-scoop coat.

It is no easy matter because Herr Hitler and Little Joe, if they insist on making an issue, will find that they are up against the law of a proud American State, namely Illinois, whose official prizefight commission, having its own seal and lawful powers, decreed that the title should be at stake in tonight's ceremony and that the winner should be champion of the world. Maybe Hitler and Little Joe want to start something with the State of Illinois.

Braddock Badly Beaten.

The fight was a pleasant little blood-letting, discoursed in a baseball plant set amid one of the most abominable slums in the United States, in a neighborhod predominantly Negro. Braddock put Louis down for an instant in the first round with a right to the chin and won the first two rounds while his strength was up. He lost every round thereafter, however, and was badly shaken several times by Louis' right hand shots at the face before the

Louis Proud Of His Title; Lauds Loser

Denies He Will Retire; Is Anxious to Meet Schmeling.

By William Weekes.

Comiskey Park, Chicago, June 22 (AP).—The new world's heavyweight champion, tan-skinned Joe Louis, his round face aglow with his first real grin in weeks, sank down on his dressing room table tonight, like a tired man—and suddenly bounced up again as though he had just realized he had conquered courageous James J. Braddock.

The Brown Bomber for a moment was almost overcome as his co-managers, John Roxborough and Julian Black, and Jack Blackburn, his teacher and trainer, charged across the dressing room of the Chicago White Sox to seize him in another mob embrace. Then he leaned back again to enjoy for the brief moment a chattering crowd of well-wishers, sports writers and photographers allowed him, to grin over his greatest triumph.

"Whew," he exclaimed after getting into the dressing room from which he had been kept for nearly 10 minutes by cheering admirers outside the door, "gettin' back here was almost as hard as fighting."

He admitted with another grin that he was tickled and proud, then sobered to pay tribute to his predecessor on the heavyweight throne.

"Jim Braddock is the gamest guy ah evah fought," he said sincerely and almost admiringly. "And he can hit some, too."

"Sure, that knockdown in the first round hurt me some," he admitted, "but not enough to make me fight his way like I did against——

He didn't get around to speak Max Schmeling's name before someone in the sweating, milling group asked him if he still hand any nations of retiring.

"Nah, not now," he grinned. "Ah'm just stahtin' out again."

"That's right," Roxborough beamed. "I'se ok for Schmeling now. Anytime the promoters get it lined up."

The Fight by Rounds

ROUND ONE.

Braddock came out fast from his corner and swung a right that missed. They came on fast, punching, exchanging light body blows. Louis glanced a right off Braddock's head. The champ stuck his left to the face as they sparred in midring.

Joe shifted to the body and they exchanged light lefts. Louis pounded away at the champion's midsection after landing a choppy right to the head. Louis landed with both hands to the head and they clinched along the ropes. Louis smashed Braddock with both hands along the ropes.

Braddock was wild and took a terrific smash to the head. Louis went down after a short right to the head, but got up without a count. They were fighting furiously at the bell, with Braddock taking several hard rights to the jaw.

The round was Louis'.

ROUND TWO.

They came out fast and Braddock missed a high left hook. Joe shot a short right to the nose and they sparred.

Braddock showed a small cut over his left eye. They buried their heads together and punched with both hands along the ropes. Braddock landed a smashing right to the head and picked off Louis' counter punches. Braddock sparred cautiously for an opening and then delivered two sharp left uppercuts to the chin. Louis was wild with his right and was speared by the champion's left twice without a return.

Braddock moved in fast and hooked his left accurately to the chin. Louis appeared puzzled and covered his head. Joe spurted and pounded Braddock hard with both hands to the chin just before the bell rang. It was Braddock's round.

ROUND THREE.

Louis ran out of his corner and blocked the champion's left lead. They pawed at each other in the middle of the ring, jabbing lightly.

Louis landed a right that connected with the champion's damaged left eye. Braddock shot both hands to the head, but took a terrific left to the head in return. Louis moved in quickly with both hands cuffing the champion.

Both were boxing more cautiously with Braddock doing most of the leading. Louis dug a left hook to the ribs and quickly followed with a lightning left to the champion's ear. Braddock connected with a looping right to the side of the head and forced Joe to give ground after landing a hard uppercut. Louis scored with a straight right to the head at the bell. It was Louis' round.

Braddock down for the full count.

ROUND FOUR.

Braddock came out on his toes and landed the first punch, a left to the ear. Joe sidestepped and gave ground. Louis took a left to the body as he countered with a left hook to the head. The challenger worked both hands to the face, but the champion kept crowding forward. Jim kept his chin well guarded, but took a hard right to the head.

Louis tried hard to force an opening, but the champion was boxing beautifully. They circled in midring without much action until Braddock found the range with both hands to the jaw.

Jim tied up Joe in a brief clinch and took a snappy left jab to the nose. Louis landed three light lefts just before the bell. Braddock's round.

ROUND FIVE.

Joe bounced back to the ropes as he took a left hook with his upraised arm. The champion connected with a hard right to the head, but was wild with his left.

Blood trickled from the challenger's nose after they exchanged punches at close range. Braddock's head bounced back from the impact of the challenger's left hand and the champion's left eye started to bleed again.

Louis worked both hands to the body, but Braddock scored with a right smash to the jaw. The pace was faster as they kept firing both hands. Both the champion and the challenger were well smeared with blood as they exchanged hard lefts just before the gong. It was Braddock's round.

ROUND SIX.

They circled for several seconds before Braddock let fly with a right that Joe took on the shoulder.

Louis worked a left jab to the face, but Braddock closed and clinched before Louis could swing his right. Braddock forced Louis to the ropes and let fly with both hands while the crowd was in an uproar. They punched furiously for a few seconds. Louis landed with a right and started blood coming over the champion's right eye.

U. S. Netters Triumph In Wimbledon Tennis

By Gayle Talbot.

Wimbledon, England, June 22.—Wimbledon, granddaddy of tennis tournaments which usually can be counted upon for at least one daily sensation, failed to unearth anything resembling an upset in six hours of play today.

With competition confined to women's singles and men's doubles, the favorites won without exception. They included all of the Americans, headed by Helen Jacobs, the defending champion, and Alice Marble, United States titleholder, in the singles, and the Davis Cup combination of Don Budge and Gene Mako in the doubles.

Miss Marble alone among the world stars came close to defeat. The San Francisco star, appearing on the famous center court for the first time, needed all of her resources to outgame Mary Hardwick, one of England's most promising young stars, after a thrilling first set. She finally won after several violent assaults on the net in the last two sets by the score of 9—11, 6—4, 6—3.

In addition, the American champion scored something of a personal triumph before a gallery predominantly feminine with her trim shorts and white jockey's cap. Wimbledon has seen nothing like them before.

Tournament officials announced that every seat has been sold for the remainder of the two-week tournament and that they had been forced to return $75,000 to applicants.

Miss Jacobs, who like Miss Marble drew a bye through the first round, disposed of Ermyntrude Harvey, of Great Britain, 6—2, 6—1.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., and Katherine Winthrop, of Boston, kept the Americna contingent intact with first round triumphs. Mrs. Andrus eliminated Mrs. E. N. S. Dickin, of Great Britain, 6—4, 6—3, and Miss Wintrop whipped Miss E. B. Hobson, 7—5, 6—4.

Anita Lizana, of Chile, Mme. Hilda Krahwinkel, former German ace, representing Denmark, and Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, also came through with equally impressive triumphs. The woman's crown still appears to be a toss-up between the trio, and Miss Jacobs, with Miss Marble a good long shot.

Budge and Mako had trouble only in the second set as they gained the second round with a 6—2, 8—6, 6—1 victory over Daniel Prenn, former German Davis Cup player, and J. C. Warboys, of England.

Bryan (Bitsy) Grant showed only winning symptoms as he and Wayne Sabin took C. M. Jones and R. A. Shayes, of Great Britain, in straight sets, 7—5, 6—4, 6—4. The Atlanta Atom, laid low with a congested shoulder last week, was troubled only with a slight weakness.

Frank Parker, alternate on the American Davis Cup team, and Larry Hall, of San Jose, Calif., also won their doubles matches. Parker paired with George de Stefani, of Italy, and defeated S. C. Clark and W. L. Grossmith, of England, 6—4, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5. Hall combined with E. C. Peters, seventh ranking English player, to eliminate J. M. Hunt and C. N. O. Ritchie, of Great Britain, 6—4, 8—6, 6—3.

The German Davis Cup combination of Baron von Cramm and Heinrich Kenkel, and the English pair of George Patrick Hughes and C. H. O. Tuckey, top seeded team, also advanced.

Race Show Is Grabbed By Terhune

Veteran Jockey Pilots 3 Winners Home at Charles Town.

By Walter Haight.

Charles Town Race Track, June 22.—Gene Terhune, veteran jockey, stole the riding show from the Palumbos, the Roots and the Machados, this bright afternoon to ride three winners in four mounts. Terhune's victories included a driving triumph with Miss Toucan in the Ritchie Purse, the day's feature event, and both ends of the daily double.

It was aboard Miss Toucan that Terhune showed his best form. Piloting a notorious quitter, Terhune flung a punishing whip that held the 7-year-old mare together long enough to take a half length decision from Justa Canter. Hogarty, a 50-1 shot was third in the group of eight competing at four and a half furlongs.

Miss Toucan did not break well but Terhune sent her up on the inside and she ran the legs off the favored Ada Wan to open a good lead. However, Justa Canter came around on the outside and threatened to take it all. Terhune then went to the whip and Miss Toucan stuck by her guns long enough to take the decision.

Terhune's personal daily double was of $45.40 proportions and was the result of victories by Hydranges, a $21.80 bet and Truthfully, the $3.80 favorite in the third race.

A good Tuesday crowd of 4,000 watched the program conducted over a fast track. The conditions of the course after a downpour last night, was a credit to the handlers of the track.

Mrs. A. M. Hall's Shaggy Ann at a $9 mutuel, defeated a field of seven sprinters in the first event. The Canter mare forged to the front soon after the break and was not headed thereafter, winning by a length from Tiger John. Third money went to Crossing Over. Frisco, making his first start in two years, was prominent when he bled and was pulled up.

Hydrangea, a filly owned by S. B. Berry, failed to run wide at the final bend today and came through with a half length victory over Royal Business, the heavily played favorite in the second race. Two Aces finishe dthird in the limit field of eight. Jockey G. Terhune gave the winner a good ride.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHAGGY ANN, $9.00, $4.20, $3.00; TIGER JOHN, $3.20, $2.60; CROSSING OVER, $3.20.

SHAGGY ANN, sent up on inside to take command going to turn, was hard ridden to the end and held TIGER JOHN safe. The latter, always forwardly placed, fought it out willingly. CROSSING OVER saved ground throughout and closed with little help from rider. PACKAWAY gained steadily and showed a good effort. ROLLING ALONG ran wide at turn and failed to rally thereafter. DOUBLE ON SEA weakened after moving up mesacingly. FRISCO was pressing pace when he bled and was pulled up.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:03½. Off at 3:07. Winner, S. B. Berry's ch. f. (2), by Hydromel—Morvich Niece. Trained by J. T. Harris. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HYDRANGEA, $21.80, $6.20, $3.60; ROYAL BUSINESS, $3.20, $2.60; TWO ACES, $2.80.

HYDRANGEA, first away, saved ground throughout and hung on well under pressure in final drive. ROYAL BUSINESS, forward factor from start, came to outside of winner in stretch and was gaining gradually at the end. TWO ACES, in tight quarters going to first turn, weakened in closing sixteenth. CROIX DE TOUR went evenly, but could not threaten. SWEEPING HOME was off slowly.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:43. Winner, L. K. Crist's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUTHFULLY, $3.80, $2.80, $2.20; LADY GURZIL, $3.40, $2.40; TULEYRIES RUBY, $2.40.

TRUTHFULLY, taken back after contesting for the pace with TULEYRIES RUBY, rallied when placed to drive entering stretch and was drawing clear at the end. LADY GURZIL, slow to begin, was sent to contention with rush and closed gamely. TULEYRIES RUBY, rushed to front at once, set a good pace, but weakened badly in closing sixteenth. JACK LOW failed to threaten seriously after improving position. GOANTELL had early speed. The others could not reach contention.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $45.40.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

On behalf of the "appleman," I want to thank the Washington insurance man for the dollar he forwarded. I bought an apple with the buck and gave it to Pork Chops who also thanks you. Trainer Feltner has divided his horses and will leave some here and ship the others to Delaware. J. B. Belk shipped Wise Sister and his others to the Wilmington plant. Jockey Terhune came back limping after winning with Hydrangea in the second race. Star Bost kicked up going to the post and one of his hoofs struck the rider. Red Palmer is the only left-handed starter in the business. The horse show meeting will be held here on July 14, 15, 16 and 17. Many of the horses now on the grounds will stick around for the horse show programs which will be virtually the same as those at the regular meeting. A canvass of the jockeys here showed a count of eight to seven in favor of Braddock in tonight's fight. Pork Chops put in one loud vote for Louis and topped it off with "yea man." Pork Chops is looking to the future. He says if he grows to be a heavy man he's going to be a second Joe Louis and if he stays light he's going to be a second Sammy Palumbo. Clocker Mike was too hungry to pick a man in the fight and too lazy to give me a good thing for tomorrow. Perhaps we are better off on both counts.

BILL.

First race—Miss Wrack seems nicely placed in this field and a win would not surprise me. Black Brigade has a lot of speed and needs two scratches to get into action. Dangerous if sent postward. Envious and Contrite have some chance.

Second race—Gay Bride will have Palumbo in the saddle tomorrow and I expect no mistakes. Needs only her share of the racing luck. Tuleyries Lad is fairly reliable and the one to beat. Adriatic might go well if in action.

Third race—Vanvola, a winner last out, promises to do a lot of hustling in this company. I'm going to string along. Pageantry is a strong horse and promises to be in the thick of contention. Mable Beyond could be prominent with the right handling.

Fourth race—Halloo has defeated as good as these and appears to be in the right spot. Rouquepine won recently and should be a forward factor. Rough Player has been rested but I can't take him with Laurin up.

Fifth race—Muddier was left at the post last out and ran a good race. If away alertly, this one will take it all. Philgal is better than that last. Stealing Home is speedy and is due respect.

Sixth race—Stool Pigeon and Timber Lady hook up in this field and I prefer them in the order named. Irene's Bob can improve on that recent effort and should be a keen factor.

Seventh race—Peggy Can has been too consistent to pass up even at this seven furlong route. Mint Bud shifts riders and seems to like this route. Miss Adeline, racing for a new owner and in light, is dangerous.

Eighth race—Early Call has been kidding us and should go well with Machado to do the riding. Counter Pass is getting ready to win a race of this sort. Star Special for the show end.

Best bet—Early Call.

NATS HAMMER WHITEHILL AND FELLER IN 11-2 TRIUMPH

Star Rookie No Puzzle in Relief Role

Gives Up 4 Runs in 2 Innings After Whitehill Is Routed.

By Shirley Povich.

The celebrated pitching arm of young Bob Feller was treated with no more respect—even less—than the salary wings of three other mere journeymen pitchers of the Cleveland club as the Nats slapped down the Indians at Griffith Stadium yesterday, 11 to 2.

With complete impartiality the Nats heaped indignities on Earl Whitehill, Paul Andrews, young Feller and Whitlow Wyatt, discharging 17 hits in their second-greatest batting foray of the season.

But Feller was their particular target. The $100,000 rookie, who had pitched to only one batter since April 24, was waved into the game by Manager Steve O'Neill in the sixth inning with the contest already hopelessly lost. He may be a great pitcher, but the 5,000 fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday may be excused for not thinking so.

Because here's what happened to last season's youthful strikeout king in the two innings his presence on the mound was tolerated by O'Neill:

Joe Kuhel whacked his second pitch for a line-drive double to centerfield. Johnny Stone bashed a single to left to drive in the Nats' sixth-inning run. And then as the rookie dozed with the ball in his hand, Stone dashed for second and stole the base after finally drawing a throw to first base.

Syd Cohen opened the seventh inning against Feller with a single to left and after an error and a walk filled the bases, Freddie Sington thumped one of Feller's fast balls for a double to right that scored three runs just like that.

The recapitulation: Four hits, four runs, one walk, one strikeout in the two innings Feller toiled.

The Nats' triumph was sweet indeed for curly-headed Carl Fischer, for it was this fellow who had been fired by the Indians a month ago, who held Cleveland in check while the Nats were piling up an 8-2 lead.

Fischer was pitching six-hit ball for six innings when Manager Harris, believing the Nats' lead secure, withdrew him in favor of Syd Cohen, who turned in a scoreless three-inning relief job to seal the Nats' triumph. When the Indians threatened to make trouble for him in the ninth, Cohen simply struck out Julius Solters with the bases full.

Those three runs the Nats scored off Earl Whitehill, their former pal, in the first inning, were no fault of Whitehill's. He was the victim of one of the queerest batting rallies ever staged. The Nats made five hits in a row, all of 'em luck-annointed and only one of 'em going beyond the confines of the infield.

Jesse Hill started it off with a hit that Second Baseman Johnny Kroner reached but couldn't come up with. Then Buddy Lewis, attempting to bunt, got a hit on a cheap pop in front of the plate. Joe Kuhel swung with all his might and barely pushed a handle hit over the shortstop's head. By this time even Whitehill was laughing.

But the Nats had only one run to this point, despite their four straight hits. Freddie Sington's single was the pay-off, though. He broke his bat on a pitch, saw the ball sail into short center for a safety and two runs crossed the plate.

But there was nothing lucky about those three runs the Nats scored off Whitehill in the fourth when they fired another five-hit charge at Whitehill. Mihalic, Ferrell and Hill bashed out clean singles and Lewis whammed a double off the top of the rightfield wall. Then Sington bashed his double to right to score three runners. Hill's ill-starred stealing attempt cost the Nats a run during the inning.

Incidentally, the Nats ran their latest winning streak to three straight.

Good Fishing News From St. Georges

Baltimore, June 22 (AP).—Joseph A. Henderson, of St. Georges Island in southern Maryland, reported to the State Conservation Commission today that hard and soft crabs and rockfish were good in that section of the Potomac River.

Henderson, an employe of the commission, said about 75 barrels of hard shell crabs and 100 dozens of sofe shell crabs were being taken at St. Georges Island a day. The soft shell crabs, he added were bringing 60 cents a dozen.

The rockfish weighed between 1 and 11 pounds, he said.

Fight By Rounds

Louis rocked Braddock with two right-hand smashes to the jaw. The champion's mouth was badly cut and he hung on. Braddock was reeling under heavy punishment, but still fighting gamely.

Blood poured from Braddock's mouth, but he was swinging with both fists at the bell. The champion's upper lip was badly split. Louis' round.

ROUND SEVEN.

Braddock came out fighting and drove Louis around the ring, swinging his right hand from a crouch.

The champion's face was in bad shape and his legs were getting wobbly. Louis landed both hands hard to the head, but Braddock refused to give ground.

Joe crossed a hard right to the face and Braddock clinched.

The challenger punched systematically, but Braddock kept countering and forcing the fight.

Jim stuck a light left to the chin and forced Louis to the ropes. But the champion was tiring fast and the left side of his face was a bloody and bruised spectacle.

Louis gave ground under Braddock's gallant attempts to rally. The challenger took two hard punches to the head just before the bell. Louis' round.

ROUND EIGHT.

Braddock's handlers worked furiously during the intermission. Louis landed the first punch, a straight left and backed the champion away as he scored with both hands to the face.

They exchanged lefts to the body, but Braddock encountered a stiff body punch as he attempted to sidestep.

Braddock went down in a heap as Louis rammed home a terrific right to the side of the head.

The champion was counted out as he collapsed in the middle of the ring.

See Browns Play —and Charge It

St. Louis, June 22 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns have put their baseball games on a charge account basis.

Eighteen hundred civic and business leaders of St. Louis have been given the privilege of seeing a game, or sending a group of friends or visiting businessmen to Sportsman's Park, and paying later.

Recipients of letters outlining the plan are asked to return a postcard, with their signature. This will be compared with their signature when they ask at the box office for tickets or send a signed note asking admittance of others. They will be billed the first of each month for the admissions used.

Nick Jerome Archibald's Foe Tonight

Winner Gets Bout With Lou Gevinson; Scott Opposes Lewis.

By Bob Garrison.

Once again Promoter Joe Turner will attempt to stage his twice-postponed weekly fight show, featuring the Nicky Jerome-Joey Archibald 10-round bout, tonight at Griffith Stadium.

Originally scheduled for last Wednesday, with Lou Gevinson meeting Archibald, it was postponed until Monday night of this week when Gevinson was injured the day prior to the fight. Nicky Jerome, the Brooklyn machine gun, was brought here to substitute for Gevinson.

Holding the complete card over to Monday, Turner was rebuked, even after the principals had weighed in at the Boxing Commission's office, by rain which fell early in the evening, forcing him to cancel the show until tonight.

The entire card has been held intact and will be presented as scheduled, Turner announced.

The winner of tonight's fight has been offered a match with Gevinson upon his recovery, the ultimate winner to be used as opposition for Sixto Escobar, bantam champion, with whom negotiations have been begun concerning his appearance in a local ring later in the summer.

Both Jerome and Archibald have dropped decisions to Escobar, but both have scored impressive victories since and are desirous of a return meeting.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Main event—Nicky Jerome, Brooklyn, N. Y., vs. Joey Archibald, Providence, R. I., featherweights, ten rounds. Rated C-plus. Jerome, brought in as a substitute for the ailing Lou Gevinson, Washington fighter, is a classy fighter, ring wise and fast. He punches hard with both hands and has impressive victories listed to his credit. Archibald and his manager, crafty Al Weill, are desirous of victory in the worst kind of way. New York showmen have long attempted to promote this go. Archibald is a long-range fighter, with a powerful right-hand wallop. Jerome is a better match for Archibald than Gevinson probably would have been. Both are 22 years old. Jerome's record gives him a slight edge. We like Jerome—probably on a decision.

Russell (Buddy) Scott, Washington, vs. Red Lewis, Richmond, light-heavyweights, ten rounds, rated C. Lewis is a good puncher, but he can be stopped. Scott is the class of the lightweight division hereabouts and would rule supreme if it were not for Hobo Williams, a middleweight, who seems to have the edge on Buddy. Taking everything into consideration, this seems to be just another easy fight for Buddy.

Preliminaries.

Roy Bailey, Miami, vs. Al Lowman, Baltimore, welterweights, six rounds, rated D. Bailey with the greatest of ease.

Gene Buffalo, Philadelphia, vs. Seaborn Ashley, Jersey City, colored welterweights, six rounds, rated D. Buffalo.

Louis Down in First Round

champion of the world with a knockout in the eighth round.

His broad Irish face criss-crossed with bandages and stitches, Braddock said he had no idea of retiring. He wants two warm-up bouts and another shot at the title.

"The two-year layoff beat me,'" he said when his handlers had patched him up sufficiently for him to talk. "I felt it coming from the fifth round on.

"I slowed up some and I began to miss more and more with my right. The lights were bothering me, because of the cut on my eye."

Braddock walked from the ring to the dressing room under his own power, but once there he flopped on a cot, closed his eyes and didn't speak for fully five minutes. He was so limp his shoes had to be cut from his feet.

While Jimmy gives Louis plenty of credit as one of the hardest hitters he has ever faced, he blames himself for not ending the fight in the first round when he sent Louis to the floor with a short right hand smash.

"I don't know, but if I had been smart enough to follow up that punch it might have been a different story. Joe's punches hurt me plenty."

Manager Joe Gould and Braddock's handlers were voluble in their praise of the big fellow's gameness.

"He went down like a real champion," Gould said. "I am proud to be his manager. He gave one of the greatest exhibitions of gameness in ring history."

Won't Retire.

"Retire? I should say not. He can lick all the other fellows, can't he? Just give me a couple of bouts under his belt and he'll go against Louis and lick him. If he had fought him last year he would have knocked him out. That attack of arthritis is what cost Jim his title."

Braddock had a bad cut under one eye and a gash in the mouth. His body was red from the pummeling Louis gave him.

dock's biggest bid for victory, was actually a source of pleasure to the second Negro ever to hold boxing's prize title—after it was all over.

To Get Up—And Win.

"Ah always wanted to get up from a knockdown an' git up and win," he said, with a sidewise glance at Blackburn.

"Yas, and you nevah shoulda been hit by that right," Blackburn charged. "And seein' you was hit, you shoulda stayed down long enough to see if you was hurt."

"I suah gave the boy hell for not staying down." Blackburn said with a flash of gold teeth, "but it's all right now—it suah is."

Roxborough said Louis was heading for Black's summer home at Stevensville, Mich., tonight, "to get some real sleep," but would return to Chicago tomorrow. As to going to Pompton Lakes, N. J., to start work for a Schmeling bout, or any other fight, that would wait until Joe had rested and done some serious eating.

"Joe's going to fight just as often as there is anyone to fight,'" Roxborough said. "He's going to be a good champion and a credit to his race, as he always has been."

final one dropped him unconscious.

He was so badly stunned that he couldn't even struggle to get his legs under him and was led from the ring with unsightly wounds about the eyes and a dreadful gash on his left cheeek which probably will require stitching and leave a scar.

It has been estimated that after he has paid off his managers, handlers, lawyers and miscellaneous help, and showered down his income taxes, calculated in high brackets on one large fiscal year, Braddock will have only $66,000. However, a little over two years ago he was earning only a few dolars a day on public relief work to support his wife and children.

Pair of Louis Rooters Die on Hearing Result

Detroit, June 22 (AP).—Two Negroes dropped dead tonight as they heard the radio announcement that Joe Louis, of Detroit, had won the world heavyweight championship by knocking out Jim Braddock. George Grenshaw, 40, collapsed and died in a poolroom. Another man, who was not identified, fell dead in a barber shop.

Middies 2d, Cornell 3d In Big Race

Huskies Set New Mark in Jayvee Event; Frosh Triumph.

By Bill Boni.

Associated Press Staff Writer.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 22.—Paced by the 1936 Olympic and Hudson Champion Varsity, the University of Washington's 3-boat Navy today swept the river for the second time in a row in the thirty-ninth annual Intercollegiate Rowing Association Regatta, thus inscribing a brilliant new page in the record books of this historic rowing classic.

While the smooth-stroking, powerful young giants coached by quiet-spoken Al Ulbrickson were going about the business of repeating their triple triumph of last year, they made a thorough job of it.

The varsity, in its 4-length victory over Navy, accomplished with a beat that never topped 36, established a new 4-mile course record of 18 minutes 33 3-5 seconds, two and a fifth seconds under the previous mark set in 1928 by California before the Bears went on to their Olympic title.

Junior Sets Record.

The junior varsity, sweeping down the choppy stream before a following wind and tide, also cracked the previous standard in its 3-mile test. The Jayvees, with a three-length margin at the finish, also over Navy, were clocked in 13:44 as even the Middies bettered the 1928 Navy mark of 14:18 1-5 by coming home in 13:55 3-5.

The Huskies' unprecedented string of successes began with the 2-mile freshman race, postponed for an hour by a downpour and brisk wind that threatened to swamp the slim shells before they could get away from the starting mark. Ulbrickson's yearlings, showing a promise that the Washington victory cycle may have more years to run, scored over California by a length and a quarter in 9:15 2-5, second fastest time ever recorded in the fresh test.

It was a one-college performance that has had no equal in the history of the I. R. A., which dates back to 1895. Cornell, in 1915, turned the "hat trick," but at that time the junior race was a four-oared event. Washington's triple last year set a record in itself as the first eight-oared competition, but the Huskies then came nowhere near today's achievements either in decisiveness of margin or in sheer speed.

Several Factors Apparent.

The excellence of the material at Ulbrickson's disposal, the favorable conditions for training that are prevalent in the Huskies' native Northwest, and, of course, Ulbrickson's undisputed ability as a coach, all had a bearing on the near-miraculous feats of the rangy Pacific Coast lads.

But there was one other factor that outweighed those individually, if not collectively. That was this afternoon's weather conditions.

Negroes' Joy Unrestrained As Louis Wins

Bedlam broke loose in "Harlems," big and small, throughout the land last night as the radio flashed news of Joe Louis' knockout of James J. Braddock in their bout for the heavyweight championship at Chicago.

Joy reigned supreme. Emotions were unrestrained as the Negro race celebrated the ascent of the second member of that race to the highest rank in fistiana. Only in Detroit, Louis' adopted home town where he started on his way to fame and fortune was the black belt comparatively quiet. The Detroit populace took his victory rather calmly.

Ten seconds after the end of the bout New York's Harlem launched its jubilant celebration. Dusky Louis fans literally poured out of doorways, streamed out of alleys and paraded through the streets shouting, laughing, chanting:

"We got a champeen! We got a champeen! Yeah, man."

Chicago's 250,000 Negroes were equally as joyous and noisy, if not more so. The night resembled New Year's Eve, with "God's chillun" tooting automobile horns, snake-dancing, exploding toy torpedoes and fire-crackers. Several bands pumped away at full blast, adding to the glee.

Center of the celebration was the Eighth Regiment Armory, only a few hundred feet from the White Sox ball park, scene of the fight. The demonstration was loud but orderly.

Yoder's 77 Paces Middle Atlantic

McCarthy's 72 Is Ruled Out by Body

Played Practice Round Before Qualifying; Hufty Trails.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Levi Yoder, the lanky defending champion, set the pace in the first day's qualifying round of the Middle Atlantic championship at Congressional yesterday, bucking the high winds for a 77, five strokes over Morton McCarthy's 72 that was later overruled by the executive committee, forcing the Old Dominion star to play today or be disqualified.

McCarthy, winner in 1935 and runner-up last year, played the nines in even par, 36-35, 72, with three birdies, 12 pars and three bogeys, but due to a practice round, played before he started his qualifying round, on the same day, the Princess Anne star was ruled out, according to the U. S. G. A. 1937 rule book.

The committee later ruled that he could play today and if he qualified he would be eligible to play through the tournament. McCarthy showed up early and played nine holes alone, according to witnesses, with a caddy. Later he played his round with Maury Fitzgerald, with neither his partner nor the committee knowing he had played a previous practice round.

Yoder, winner of the Chevy Chase and Woodmont invitations, catered to an unruly putter that cost him a pair of two-putt greens and two missed putts of less than the length of the weapon he was using. He played the rounds in 39—38—77.

Trailing the temporary medalist by a stroke was Page Hufty the Chevy Chase linksman, with a pair of 39's, and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, with a like score.

Bernard Dennell, Kenwood, required 7 strokes on the seventeenth hole and finished with an 80 to tie with Merrill Lord, Columbia, who shot 41—39, 80. Forest Thompson, of Beaver Dam, and Dan Moorman, of the host club were next in line with 81's.

The majority of the field, including the Baltimore stars and Volney Burnett and Harry Pitt of the local contingent, will play today with the match play rounds commencing tomorrow. McCarthy is also capable of duplicating his 72 if he shows up today.

Yankee Wins Again.

Aboard Coast Guard Cutter Faunce, off Newport, R. I., June 22 (AP).—Gerard B. Lambert's yacht Yankee today defeated for the third time Chandler Hovey's Rainbow by a wide margin in trials to determine an America's Cup defender. Rainbow gave up the race as Yankee crossed the finish line.

Attention McCarthy—Appear at Club Today

Attention—Morton McCarthy—the Middle Atlantic Golf Association, following the letter of the 1937 rules, disallowed your score in the qualifying round of the Middle Atlantic yesterday, at Congressional, for playing a practice round.

If you appear at the course today and play 18 holes your score will be accepted, it has been decided. If not, you will be disqualified. The officers of the body knew not where to reach you and have requested this notice to be published.

U Street Hails Crowning of Colored Champion face is red," barked the announcer.

A confident smile traveled through the groups.

"Joe messin' him up now," said one listener.

Their bodies swayed with the words, and when Braddock landed a hard one on Joe's jaw they almost winced. Joe Louis tonight, said the announcer, was a different Joe Louis than went went down before Max Schmeling.

"Yeah, he was doped that night."

As Braddock continued to withstand Louis' murderous punching, there were several words of praise for the Irishman's courage. By this time, however, the tension had become terrific. Then came the eighth.

"Braddock is down!"

A shrill cry sounded, but it was stilled as the referee went on to count. Then it came—a wild and exultant shriek, "Y-e-o-w!"

Dance on Sidewalks.

Men whirled and shook hands. Some good-naturedly hauled off and struck their neighbors with a right-hand punch a la Louis. Meanwhile, the noise was growing to unbelievable proportions.

The sidewalks, deserted a moment before, became a live. A young sheik, wearing a sports coat with awning stripes, danced down the sidewalk with a U street belle. Little boys did a buck and wing. Merrymakers came running out of homes, restaurants and private clubs to go along with the whirlwind.

"Ain't nobody can beat Joe Louis. Yeah, man!"

"Hey, Mr. Braddock."

Whites who ventured along U street encountered no discourtesy, only an occasional good-natured jibe of "Hey, Mr. Braddock."

The liquor stores did a rushing business, and soon U street was littered with broken glass. The raw bars, the hamburger parlors and the pool halls were empty. It was a night to drink and shout, not to eat or play pool.

The only sad spectacle on U street was to be found in Second Precinct Station. There, behind the bars, could be seen two colored men who picked last night of all nights to get arrested before the fight started.

"Ain't nobody can beat Joe Louis."

St. Louis, June 22 (AP).—Helen Stephens, Olympic sprint champion, was clocked at 0:10.9 today in winning a 100-yard dash on the Tuberculosis Day program in connection with the Cardinals-Dodgers baseball game at Sportsman's Park.

The listed world record for women is 11 seconds, but the Fulton, Mo., flash sped the century at Cape Girardeau, Mo., last month in the unofficial time of 10.5 seconds. She also has been timed on several occasions at 10.8 seconds.

Cardinal Manager DodgesDeanQuery

St. Louis, June 22 (AP).—Frankie Frisch, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, was asked today if he expected any pitching help this season from Paul Dean, who is recovering from an operation on his hurling arm.

"Let's talk about something else," Frisch replied, parrying the question.

Paul, younger brother of Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, has been taking daily workouts, but not strenuous ones, for two weeks. He said he felt no pain in his right arm, which failed him early in the 1936 season.

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

In the lingo of the big-shot betting commissioners, the latest odds on last evening's Braddock-Louis fuss were "fourteen and twelve," which may sound like so much Greek to the man on the street, but those figures are perfectly understandable to the guys who live by the wager.

POVICH.

There never was any doubt who would be the favorite in a Braddock-Louis battle. From the moment the pair was matched, Louis was established as the heavy choice among the betting fraternity. Thus, "fourteen and twelve" could only mean 14 to 5 and 12 to 5 against Braddock.

Those were the figures your Washington betting commissioner was being quoted yesterday when he called New York betting men on the long-distance telephone. He knew what "fourteen and twelve" meant—that the New York gamblers would lay 12 to 5 against Braddock, but that if he wanted to get down a bet on Louis, he'd have to wager 14 to 5.

* * * *

This department's operative reports that the odds on the championship battle varied little throughout the day—in fact, "fourteen and twelve" had been the figures of the New York betting men for the past week. The lack of what the boys call "smart money" had kept the figures pretty constant.

* * * *

This "smart money" apparently failed to show up for the Braddock-Louis battle. New York men reported bets arriving only in driblets. The commissioners lay great store by the source of the bets offered. If they consider it wise dough—the bets of guys who have cleaned up in the past—then the odds tumble fast, but none of that kind of money put in its appearance.

* * * *

The New York bookies, who maintain sumptuous offices on Wall street with lavish brokerage layous, waited in vain for Sam Rosoff, the big subway man, to get down on either fighter for 10 or 20 grand, according to this department's informant. Rosoff's bet would have been significant of which way the wind was blowing.

* * * *

And no wager by Jock Whitney was noted either. Rare has been the championship fight when Multimillionaire Whitney has not been interested to the extent of a $10,000 wager, but he has been discreetly keeping the rubber on his bankroll for this fight, either because he didn't like the odds or didn't like both fighters.

* * * *

There didn't figure to be much change in the odds, either, until Owney Madden, New York big shot, posted his little wager of $20,000 or so on the fight. Madden owns a piece of Braddock and a bet of that size out of him would have sent the odds crashing, but apparently he was not disposed to bet on his man.

* * * *

They look, too, for those bets from out on the Coast when these big championship fights near ringtime. They've been flush out there for the past few years and Coast money has had a consistent habit of being the right money. There was early support for Braddock from the Coast which kept the odds on Louis from rocketing even higher, but no late rush of Braddock money was noted.

* * * *

New York's chief betting commissioner who, popular belief to the contrary, is not Mr. Jack Doyle, of Broadway, but a young fellow who migrated from Boston not so many years ago, deserted the strict tenets of his profession for this particular fight and was not satisfied to take down his commission profits and let it go at that. He was gambling on Braddock to win.

On the Air Today

Long neglected as a source for radio-preference polls, the little rural communities of average population under 760 inhabitants come into recognition with the completion of the Co-operative Analysis of Broadcasting (CAB nee Crosley survey). The small towns used in the survey were located an average of 50 miles away from the station-city, but in basic network station's area. All surburbs and industrial towns were excluded. Completed interviews listed preferences of 9,815 farmers. 10,785 rural set owners in 355 towns having the previously mentioned average population.

Here are some of the findings:

Approximately 87 per cent of farms with telephones have radios; the rural listening audience is at its peak at 8 p. m. as compared to the peak of the urban listeners, which is 9:30 p. m.; rural preferences, according to CAB, rank thus: news, novelties, drama, serials, personalities, semi-classical music, as compared to the urban choice of variety, musical revues, dance music and classical music.

The programs which the rural group found to their liking were, 1. Jack Benny, 2. Major Bowes, 3. Lowell Thomas, 4. Lum & Abner, 5. Lux Theater, 6. Eddie Cantor, 7. Fibber McGhee & Molly, 8. Amos 'n' Andy, 9. Phil Baker and 10. National Barn Dance. Compare these with the ranking of the urban preference: 1. Jack Benny, 2. Lux Theater, 3. Eddie Cantor, 4. Major Bowes, 5. Rudy Vallee, 6. Fred Allen, 7. Phil Baker, 8. Hollywood Hop, 9. Bing Crosby and 10. Al Jolson.

This information is due to have quite an effect on radio script writers, sponsors, editors, as well as all members of the radio trade.

Wheat Climbs With Crop Ruin In Dakota Belt

One 800,000-Acre Area Is Reported 'Practically Wiped Out.'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 22.—Flurried by reported huge crop losses in North Dakota, Chicago wheat values late today scored 2⅜ cents overnight advance, and held most of the gain.

R. O. Cromwell, widely known crop authority who is touring the Northwest, wired that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 acres of North Dakota wheat had been lost out of a normal planting of 4,500,000 acres. He cited one North Dakota wheat region of 800,000 acres as "practically wiped out."

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1¼@2 cents above yesterday's finish, July, 1.13¼@½; September, 1.13¼@⅜; December, 1.14¾@⅞; corn, ⅛ off to ¾ up; July, 1.15⅝@⅞; September, 1.02⅜@½; December, 76¾@⅞; oats varying from ½ cent setback to ⅜ advance, September, 35½, and rye ¼@½ down, September 79½. Provisions results were 5 cents lower to 2 cents higher.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stock Prices Harden in More Active Trading; Wheat Continues Rise.

New York, June 22.—Stocks rose a little on balance in somewhat more active trading. Sales volume rose to around 530,000 shares. Government bonds again were easier and commodities were strong in spots. September wheat moved up 2⅛ cents to 113½ cents a bushel.

It was difficult for the market to determine whether the use of troops to keep mills closed, thereby perhaps preventing disorder temporarily, was a bull point or a bear point. Such action was calculated to strengthen the position of the C. I. O. and to discourage those hopeful of Government action calculated to preserve order without aiding either side in the matter in dispute, and it also insured a temporary loss of profits for the factories involved, the railroads and other businesses directly or indirectly concerned.

Strictly from an immediate money making standpoint, the stock market may have been right in advancing prices a little on the theory that the mediation board would succeed in bringing about an agreement which would permit a resumption of peaceful operation in the steel industry. Doubts will arise, as some persons view it, because of the probability that once the steel affair is settled to his satisfaction, Lewis will raise more trouble in other industries. Merely to transfer the bombing to another sector of the industrial front is scarcely a long range bull point.

Stocks have had perhaps an overdose of bearishness anyhow and welcomed any excuse to turn to a fresh view. Steel issues lead the improvement which was apparent at the start, when turnover also increased. Later in the trading the market relapsed into its old rut of sluggishness, but the early gains were fairly well mainained. Some buying attention then turned to the utilities, metals, farm implements and motors.

Coppers Advance.

Anaconda and Kennecott rose more than a point each, but not all members of the wining group were able to stir out of the ground. Rails were a mixed lot. Santa Fe, Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central puffed slowly along. Delaware & Hudson, on the other hand, broke into new ground. Southern preferred recovered.

Good buying was seen in Montgomery Ward and Allis Chalmers, both affected by the farm price increases. Steel share advances were 1 to 2 points. Bethlehem was among the stronger set. United States Steel failed to stay in its most advanced position. Youngstown hardened General Motors recrossed 50 and Chrysler held above par. Other stocks that rallied well were Westinghouse, Celanese, Douglas, United States Gypsum and Electric Power.

General Electric was steady to strong. National Dairy Products was active in the last hour and weak as well. Shell Union recovered an early loss of more than a point on announcement of a higher dividend. Trading began in the split shares of Cluett Peabody and National Supply. Prices were close to the final sales of the old shares on an equivalent basis. An unusual number of 15-day delivery transactions in numerous stocks took place, meaning a driblet of foreign liquidation.

Bill Rates Mixed.

Money rates appear to be hardening, if almost imperceptibly. This week's interest equivalent on the Treasury's discount bill issue was a shade higher than that of the previous week, although the rate is still less than six-tenths of 1 per cent. Today brought a fall of a sixteenth to an eighth in the bankers' acceptance rate, but that was indicative of special conditions in that market rather than of a softening of money.

Foreign funds have been coming this way in large volume, as the gold shipments, partly from dishoarded metal in Europe, show. At the same time the halt to stock and commodity markets has had the effect of keeping the foreign money in the banks awaiting short-term employment. It has been difficult to find suitable short-term securities, as the demand for them is great, and for the same reason. Bankers say it was principally the pressure of foreign demand for bankers' bills that put up rates today in the hope of drawing bills into the market.

Were industrial conditions on this side more settled, and confidence strengthened by signs from the Government that business will not be coerced into meeting the extravagant demands of the labor dictators or paralyzed by taxation, the huge pile of unemployed funds in the market would once more seek the high yields of common stocks. Seldom have stocks in a period of good business sold at so low a ratio of earnings to prices, a fact which is proof of the low ebb of business confidence and belief in the maintenance of current rate of profits.

Banking Position.

The figures of weekly reporting member banks as of June 16 were naturally distorted by the Treasury's June 15 financing operatins and tax collections. Government deposits rose $444,000,000 and holdings of Government direct obligations increased $298,000,000. In these days of slender reserves banks prefer Government deposit liabilities to the use of cash for payment of their subscriptions. They resold many of the Treasury securities to customers. The increase in Government securities held by the banks was a major factor in lifting bank loans and investments $359,000,000. Loans increased $84,000,000, of which $42,000,000 were in the "commercial, industrial and agricultural" classification. Loans to banks increased $44,000,000. Reserves were down $87,000,000 and other securities were off $32,000,00. Of the increase of $444,000,000 in Government deposits, $292,0000 was in the New York district. Demand deposits adjusted were down $264,000,000 for the country as a whole, the decrease being mainly in New York, where such deposits shrank $231,000,000.

France.

Comparative quiet ruled along the French front while efforts were made to form a new cabinet. Francs improved a little further and sterling was strong. On this side it is believed that nothing more than a truce is taking place in France, for whatever the complexion of the new cabinet, fiscal problems to be solved are formidable. The position is like ours in so far as too much distance has been traveled along the inflationary road to turn back suddenly. A conservative government likely would reassure flighty French capital and make it easier this autumn for the government to refund maturing loans, but reduction of social expenditures probably would meet with much opposition, and in the meantime the country as a whole is said to be still friendly toward the Front Populaire.

Swelling Taxes Increase 30% In Past Decade

Current Year's Total of 11.6 Billion Is 20% of U. S. Income.

New York, June 22.—With the current tax bill of the Nation, including Federal, State and local levies, reaching an aggregate figure of $11,600,000,000, broadening of the income tax base is advocated today by the Index, of the New York Trust Co., as the most practical means of awakening public consciousness to the gravity of the present situation. The bank review points out that in the past decade tax collections have risen almost 30 per cent, and while in 1927-1929 they constituted 12.3 per cent of the realized national income, the ratio for the fiscal year 1937 is almost 20 per cent.

"The complexities of the tax problem confronting the United States can hardly be exaggerated," says the Index. "For the increase in collections made necessary by demands consequent upon the depression, and projected into the future through the expansion of the social services undertaken by the Federal Government, is hardly more serious than the related problems centering upon the inequitable distribution of taxes and competition among different governmental units to tap the available sources of revenue.

"If anything like the ratio of taxes to national income prevailing before the depression is to be restored, a national income in excess of $100,000,000,000, or 25 per cent higher than that obtained in 1929, would be required. Without any immediate prospect of such a huge income, the burden of present taxes is more likely to increase than to diminish unless the public emphatically insists upon a reduction in expenditures and a revision of existing levies along more equitable and practical lines."

Japan Sending U. S. $57,400,000 Gold

Tokyo, June 22 (AP).—Confronted with an adverse trade balance of 825,060,000 yen (about $179,375,000), Japan prepared today to ship 200,000,000 yen (about $57,400,000) in gold bullion to the United States to settle Nippon's international accounts and support the yen. The amount is in addition to the 200,000,000 yen already sent. Today's shipment from Kobe to San Francisco was 22,000,000 yen about $6,314,000). Thus far, the government has bought 430,000,000 yen (about $123,410,000) of newly mined gold to cover the shortage in Japan's gold holdings abroad.

The following is merely a brief outline of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Shares.

THE COMPANY The Company was organized in 1929 under the laws of Delaware to continue the several long-established businesses of The Fleischmann Company and its subsidiaries, and of E. W. Gillett Company, Limited, Chase & Sanborn, Royal Baking Powder Company, and The Widlar Food Products Company. The Company and its subsidiaries conduct a manufacturing, processing and merchandising business in a large variety of products, primarily food products and foodstuffs, consisting chiefly of yeast and other bakery products sold under the name "Fleischmann" direct to over 30,000 bakers, hotels, and public institutions, and grocery products sold direct to approximately 300,000 grocers and other retail outlets. It is estimated that over half the consolidated net profit from operations is derived from yeast. Their other important products include: Chase & Sanborn Coffee (and other coffees), Tender Leaf Tea (and other teas), Royal Baking Powder (and other baking powders), Royal Desserts, Fleischmann's Gin, malted grains and vinegar. The advertising of items sold under trade names is of great importance, and expenditures for this purpose constitute a very substantial part of the Company's selling costs. Over 90% of the dollar sales in 1936 were made in the United States and over 95% in the United States and Canada combined. New lines of products may be added from time to time.

Hearings have been held in a proceeding against the Company and a subsidiary before the Federal Trade Commission, under the Robinson-Patman Act, on a complaint alleging certain unlawful price discriminations in the sale of yeast. The Company denies any unlawful discrimination. If the Commission's decision should require a substantial change in present price differentials or in present selling practices, there might be a substantially adverse effect on the Company.

The Company and subsidiaries own or lease a large number of manufacturing, processing and selling units, in widely scattered localities throughout the United States, and in Canada and certain other countries.

CAPITALIZATION The Company has no funded debt. As of December 31, 1936 there were outstanding 70,693 shares of $7 Cumulative Preferred Stock, Series A, without par value, and 12,645,423 shares of Common Stock, without par value, stated value $2 per share. In addition, 1,369 shares of Preferred Stock and 3,218 shares of Common Stock were reserved for issuance pending the merger of a subsidiary, which became effective April 8, 1937. All of the $7 Cumulative Preferred Stock, Series A was called for redemption on June 1, 1937. The only capital securities now outstanding are 12,648,108 shares of Common Stock.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The net proceeds from the sale of the 200,000 shares of $4.50 Cumulative Preferred Stock (estimated at $18,341,950 after deducting expenses) will be used in part to pay the principal of temporary bank loans of $8,700,000 incurred on May 6, 1937 for redemption of the Company's 72,061 shares of $7 Cumulative Preferred Stock, Series A. The remainder of the net proceeds (estimated at $9,641,950), no part of which has been allocated to specific uses, will be added to working capital. It is possible that part of it may be used for the acquisition or improvement of plants, equipment or other property or businesses.

EARNINGS The following tabulation of results of operations of the Company and its subsidiaries consolidated (compiled from figures audited by Haskins & Sells) is taken from the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more complete notes and comments therein:

†Net Income, as stated above, differs from that of published statements through deductions of yearly charges for amortization of patents which were not made in published statements. The Company has, since organization, consistently stated the value of all intangibles at $1.00 on its published statements, charging off their book value against surplus.

†† The provisions for depreciation of property for certain years have been subsequently reduced, the adjustments being credited to surplus, and provisions for the resulting additional income taxes have been charged to surplus.

Unaudited figures for the first three months of 1937 show consolidated net sales of $31,095,991 and consolidated net income of $2,824,551, as against consolidated net sales of $27,005,387 and consolidated net income of $2,773,229 for the corresponding period of 1936. These figures are computed on the same basis as those in the above tabulation, but before providing for surtax on undistributed profits, if any.

$4.50 CUMULATIVE PREFERRED STOCK The total amount of Preferred Stock authorized is 350,000 shares, issuable in series, certain terms of which may be established by the Board of Directors. The 200,000 shares of $4.50 Cumulative Preferred Stock constitute the only series now established. Dividends on Common Stock (other than dividends payable in stock of any class) may be declared only out of aggregate consolidated net earnings accruing subsequent to January 1, 1937 available therefor, plus $5,000,000.

At all meetings of stockholders holders of Preferred Stock and Common Stock are entitled to one vote for each share held. Whenever Preferred dividends shall be in arrears in an amount equal to the annual dividend and until all accumulated dividends shall have been paid or set apart for payment, holders of the Preferred Stock shall also have the exclusive right to elect two directors. Neither the Preferred nor the Common Stock has any preemptive rights.

The Certificate of Incorporation, as amended, provides in effect that the Company shall not create any class of stock senior to the Preferred Stock without the approval, given in the manner provided in such Certificate, of the holders of two-thirds of the Preferred Stock; and shall not adversely amend any of the preferences, special rights or powers thereof, increase the authorized number of shares thereof, create any class ranking pari passu therewith, or incur or guarantee funded debt (with the exceptions provided in the definition of funded debt contained in such Certificate), without the approval, given in like manner, of the holders of a majority of the Preferred Stock.

The foregoing brief outline of the stock provisions is subject to the more detailed statement in the Certificate of Incorporation, as amended, which is included in the Registration Statement and summarized in the Offering Prospectus.

Senate Routs G. O. P., Passes Relief Measure

No Record Vote on $1,500,000,000 Bill; Amendments Are Swept Aside.

see waste of money in one place and lack of money in others. We see men and women who are trained for some particular line of work put to work on something entirely different, with misery to themselves and wastage of their possible contribution to the community."

$221,000,000 Again Granted.

The measure approved by the Senate not only appropriates $1,500,000,000 in new relief funds, but reappropriates about $221,000,000 in unexpended and unobligated balances from former appropriations. A futile attempt to turn the unobligated funds back into the Treasury was made by the Senate Appropriations Committee early in the six-day debate, but failed.

The bill carries a provision, inserted in the House, requiring Hopkins to allocate his funds over a full year, in an effort to avoid another relief deficiency.

Reich's Planned Economy Is Introduced at Border

Morley Gets First Taste of Nazi Policy as Customs Agents Awaken Him at Rude Hour on Entering Germany.

Rather impolitely, but only to economize space, I sat on the bed while exhibiting these. Suspicion seemed aroused thereby. I was ordered to my feet while a thorough search was made under the mattress to see if anything was secreted there. This amused me rather more than the next approach. "Have you any newspapers?" inquired the customs officer, politely but very firmly.

I had with me so many newspapers, or clippings therefrom, that I scarcely knew what to answer. Together with documentary material of various kinds they occupied probably one-quarter of the cubic content of my suitcase. I felt that both of us, not to mention the man in the doorway would be weary long before these could be scrutinized for any material critical of the new Germany. So I pointed to the current issue of that excellent French weekly, L'Europe Nouvelle, which happened to be in full view. "I have that," I said ambiguously.

HERE IS SOMETHING AGAINST GERMANY.

The move was not altogether happy. The first article in that paper, headlined on the cover, was entitled "L'affaire du Deutschland," discussing the bombing of the German battleship of that name in the Spanish port of Ibiza. On this my friend in green pounced with avidity. Ah, ha," said he, "hier is etwas gegen Deutschland."

It was difficult to tell whether the observation was an assertion or a question. It seemed best to regard it as the latter. So I replied, truthfully, that not having read the article I couldn't say, but that I would be surprised if an article in so excellent a paper could be regarded as anti-German. I explained that "Deutschland" referred to the ship and not the nation. Becoming bolder I even offered to translate the well-phrased thoughts of M. Pierre Brossolette into German. May his amiability forgive me for the liberties I would have taken with them.

The generous gesture was repudiated by the Nazi official, with far more certainty than gratitude. "I read French," he remarked in his own language, "as well as English."

To so pointed a remark any reply would have seemed superfluous. In complete silence the man in the doorway looked at me; I looked at my little friend; he looked at the article. After a moment which seemed decidedly long he flung it down, saluted stiffly, waved his companion on and closed the door behind him. My suitcase had not even been opened.

I was alone. I realized that I was in Germany for the first time since 1931, and therefore for the first time under the Third Reich. I lit a cigarette and brooded on that "something against Germany" expression.

CHESSIE WOULD NOT BE AT HOME.

One does not sleep like a kitten in a European sleeper. At 5 o'clock I was awake again. The sun was just up and in the early morning light the fertile Hanoverian plain was unbelievably neat and beautiful.

There were patches of fairy-tale forest, the predominant oaks and firs interspersed with tall white birch trees, and with groves of those beeches from which comes "cell wool," out of which an increasing proportion of German clothing is now made. Already men and women were at work in the fields and factory chimneys were smoking in the little towns. There is no talk of a 40-hour week in Germany today.

The German countryside between Hanover and Berlin gives none of the over-populated impression which is so strong in Belgium. But every inch is utilized. Between the fields of wheat and rye, on which the government counts so strongly for its self-sufficiency program, are patches of potatoes and other vegetables. They come right to the edge of the railroad right-of-way and to the very banks of the canals and sluggish little streams.

The grazing land, dotted with fat Holstein cattle, is as carefully tended as a park. A big rabbit, with ears perked at the passing train, seemed undisciplined and therefore out of place. But soon or late, I conclude, the state will conscript him for a stew.

There was time to sleep again before reaching Berlin. The capital is a long way from the western frontier, a circumstance which kept it immune from air raids in the last war. There is no such certainty now.

The ministry of war has just announced the perfection of a new gas mask, and shortly every family will be told to provide itself with this thoroughly modern item of household equipment. The 14-year-old son of an old friend, long stationed here, is very anxious to obtain his mask before he leaves to enter school in America this fall. With that, and a "wool" suit, largely made from beachwood, he rightly believes that he will impress his future classmates.

MILITARY CONSIDERATIONS DECIDE LOCATIONS.

Military considerations are also affecting the distribution of German industry. Factories for the manufacture of synthetic products are being located in the center of the country and there is a program for breaking down, so far as is economically possible, the huge industrial concentrations which characterize the Ruhr and parts of the Rhineland area.

In spite of the emphasis placed upon the new four-year-plan, proclaimed by Hitler in his address to the Nazi party convention in Nuremberg last September, this does not come first in the considerations of the nation's leaders. Perfection of the military machine, now far advanced, is at present the primary objective. Next comes production for export, if, as and when possible. The four-year plan for the attainment of complete national self-sufficiency, for all that it is so widely advertised, is a flexible program which may be largely scrapped if it seems in Germany's larger interests to do so.

This has lately been demonstrated, though not to general knowledge, in the case of "Buna," a synthetic rubber made from a base of coal and lime and demonstrably as satisfactory as the real article. Its present production cost is several times that of the natural product, but it is claimed that with mass production this difference will largely disappear.

Consequently Gen. Goering, as commissioner for the four-year plan, has proclaimed a list of numerous articles, such as bathing shoes, gloves and toy balloons, which must not be made from natural rubber. Simultaneously the brown-coal industry was ordered to find a sum of about $5,000,000 to build factories for the manufacture of "Buna."

EVIDENCE THAT POLICY MAY BE RELAXED.

The enforcement of this edict has now been postponed, since the rise in world steel prices makes it possible for Germany to export that commodity profitably. Steel which would otherwise be going into domestic construction is consequently going abroad, and the entire building program, not merely that of "Buna" factories, is slowed down. This is strong evidence to support the claim of Dr. Schacht, the powerful minister of economics, that Germany is not wedded to "Autarky;" that she will relax or reverse the self-sufficiency program whenever conditions of international trade encourage her to do so.

In the meantime, however, production in Germany will be regulated by the Nazi regime much as one regulates the temperature of water by turning taps. And along with this regulation the German people, whether artisans, farmers or capitalists, will be regimented in whatever way the all-powerful state decrees. Whether the purpose be peace or war half a dozen men determine the orders to be given in Germany today. And nobody dares, or is likely to dare, to question them.

For all that, judging by observation and conversation, the tension in present-day Germany is less than the outside world believes, and seems to be diminishing further. It is probably a sign of Nazi strength, rather than weakness, that a measure of fairly outspoken comment is now perceptible.

The current stories illustrate the trend. One which is very popular concerns an intoxicated man who was arrested for proclaiming on the street that "first I come and then comes Hitler." After warning him of the seriousness of the offense the magistrate demanded his name.

"Heinrich Heil," said the drunk triumphantly.

City Schools Closing Today For Vacation

90,000 Children Free; Summer Sessions Open July 1.

Ninety thousand Washington boys and girls walk out of school today—and it won't be a strike. They are dismissed.

After one of the latest closings in recent years the District public schools will close for the summer vacation when today's sessions are over. Classes, in fact, are already ended, and in nearly all of the more than 200 school buildings in the Capital all that remains to be done is to distribute the all-important promotion cards.

The day also brings to a climax the commencement session. Four high schools for white children, and one for colored hold their exercises today. These are Woodrow Wilson, Central, McKinley, Western and Dunbar.

History in Making.

Woodrow Wilson's commencement is a history making affair, because it is the first one staged in the school. Norman J. Nelson, principal, said yesterday there will be 290 graduates in this first class.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, who presides at Woodrow Wilson ceremonies, will take particular interest in the exercises because her youngest son, Bobby, is one of the graduates.

Miner Teachers College, the colored teachers' training school, is the only public school leaving its commencement until tomorrow.

Youngsters throughout the system are getting the vacation breaks over their teachers. While the pupils are dismissed today, teachers must remain on duty through Friday.

Summer Sessions.

By the end of the week, however, all will be free until mid-September—all except those who go to summer school. Summer classes for elementary, junior and senior high pupils will open July 1, E. J. Lockwood, the director, announced yesterday. It was pointed out that enrollment in the 30-day term will be limited. Only students who want to make up class deficiencies, who want to repeat a course for strengthening purposes, or who take the work with the idea of advancing a semester in the regular winter school, will be permitted to enter.

With the closing of public schools today the school year in the Capital ends. Parochial and private schools have been the scenes of closing exercises for the last three weeks.
